30 INJURED IN BRAINTREE TRAIN CRASH

POWERS DEFIED BY NICHOLAS

LONDON, April 28.—Threatened with invasion by Austria, supported by the Powers, Montenegro still refuses to yield.

M. Popovitch, the Montenegrin plenipotentiary to London, today handed the reply of his country to the demands of England and the continental Powers that Scutari be given up.

This reply, which was formally tendered to the Ambassador at the Foreign Office, protests against coercion and requests that the Powers again examine the question before pressing a last ultimatum.

"Montenegro, despite its size, desires to be placed on an equal footing with the other members of the Balkan League," says the communication. "We request the same consideration and demand the same justice as given to the stronger States."

Advices today by way of Vienna state that Crown Prince Danilo and most of the Montenegrin troops in Scutari left that city today and are marching northward. The Montenegrins left only five battalions of men in Scutari, it was reported. The dispatch indicated that the Montenegrin army is marching toward Antivari, the port of Cettinje, where the Austrians threaten to land a force.

Admiral Eaton's Will Is Allowed by Probate Court

The will of the late Rear Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton was allowed in the Probate Court in Brockton today by Judge Loyed B. Chamberlin; Judge George W. Kelley of Rockland appearing for the will. There was no opposition.

Judge Kelley was appointed executor to take the place of Mrs. Jennie May Eaton, now in the Plymouth County jail on the charge of having murdered her husband by poisoning him.

I. W. W. LEADER IN MILFORD COURT ON STRIKE CHARGES

MILFORD, April 28.—Joseph M. Coldwell, the I. W. W. leader of the Draper Company strikers, was in court today on four charges resulting from his alleged violation of the new Hopedale ordinances against parading and speech-making. The charges against Coldwell are: Being a disorderly person, making a speech without a permit, conducting a parade without a permit, delivering inflammatory speeches at Milford.

The taking of testimony took up the entire forenoon and a good part of the afternoon session of the court.

BEARS MESSAGE TO JOLO FROM SULTAN

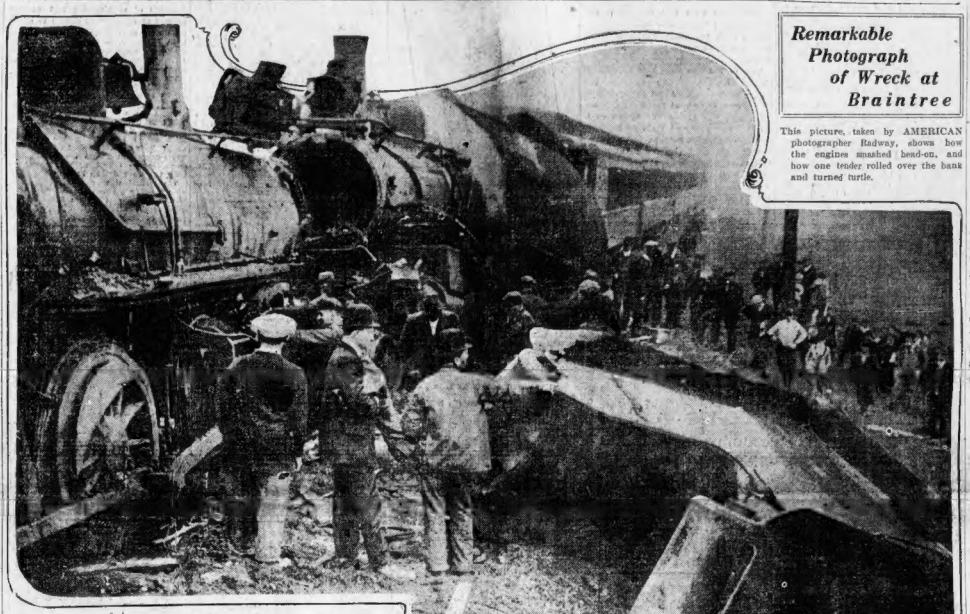
WASHINGTON, April 28.—Bearing the message of the Sultan of Turkey, head of the Mahometan faith, to the members of that religion in the Philippines, Major John P. Finley, U. S. A., is believed by War Department to be on his way back from Constantinople to the Jolo Archipelago, with the Sultan's assurance that the United States is friendly to the Mahometans and that their religion will not be attacked.

RUSSELL WON'T TAKE PORT JOB

Joseph B. Russell, former president of the Chamber of Commerce, who has been mentioned as a candidate for Collector of the Port, announced today that while he appreciated the kindness of those who have approved his candidacy, recent developments have made it impossible for him to accept the appointment, even if tendered.

IS FINED $100 FOR THREAT TO WORKER

Maurice O'Hearn of Cortland street, Everett, was fined $100 today in the Charlestown Court for intimidating Patrick Powers, employed at the Cochrane Chemical Works, Everett, where there is a strike. O'Hearn was committed. The men had an altercation in Sullivan square.



Remarkable Photograph of Wreck at Braintree

This picture, taken by AMERICAN photographer Radway, shows how the engines smashed head-on, and how one tender rolled over the bank and turned turtle.

MAN WHO SLEW FIRST WIFE IS ACCUSED OF MURDERING SECOND

James Southerland, an ice cream man of Whitman, was arrested today and held pending a police investigation into the death of his wife, a bride of two months.

Mrs. Southerland was found dead in the family home on Washington street, Whitman. Her body was scalded from the head to the knees, as if she had been thrown into a tub of boiling water.

In 1899, Southerland was sentenced to State Prison for killing Josephine A. Cowell, otherwise known as Blanche Rand, also known as the wife of Southland. He beat the woman on January 1 1899. So severe were her injuries that she died about three weeks later. Southland was indicted for manslaughter, was tried and found guilty there and sentenced to Dedham jail, where he was later sentenced to not less than twelve to fifteen years in prison.

In March, 1911, after serving the minimum sentence, Southerland was released from the Charlestown prison.

I Don't Care Her Last Words.

Dr. F. J. Boulleau was summoned, "I am the doctor," he said to Mrs. Southerland, who was breathing her last.

"I don't care," she feebly replied and then she died.

Dr. Boulleau found that beside being scalded Mrs. Southerland had been tortured and scratched. There was a jagged wound in her neck. She had been bleeding freely.

The husband was in the house. Dr. F. J. Hanley was summoned. Dr. Hanley immediately went back to the home of Chief of Police Brouillard. Southerland was taken into custody.

Associate Medical Examiner J. J. McNamara was summoned to Whitman as soon as Southerland had been placed in the lockup.

The associate medical examiner, after viewing the body, said:

"I cannot give the cause of death until I talk with District Attorney Albert F. Barker, who is in Dedham at court today."

Lives Only Ten Minutes.

Mrs. Southerland lived only ten minutes after she was found.

Broken glass was strewn about the dining room where Mrs. Southerland was lying.

The police began an investigation soon after the arrival of the associate medical examiner. Southerland was closely questioned at the lockup. Chief Brouillard refused to say what story the detained man told. An autopsy will probably be held tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Southerland were married at Whitman just before Christmas. The ceremony was performed by Town Clerk Frederick Sharp. The couple went to live in the Sproul place just back of the Whitman Bank building.

Apparently they were happy together. Bert Simmons, a friend of the Southerlands, stated today that he was at their home last evening and that Southerland and his bride seemed happy and contented.

Southerland is forty. Mrs. Southerland was thirty-five.

KAISER GUARDED FROM ASSASSINS AT BADEN CAPITAL

FRANKFORT-ON-THE-MAIN, Ger., April 28.—The police of Karlsruhe were instructed from Berlin to keep special watch during Emperor William's visit there as a number of suspected persons were reported to have departed for the capital of Baden.

According to the Karlsruhe correspondent of the Frankfort Gazette, the Emperor changed his plans at the last moment and instead of proceeding on the special train which had been prepared for him drove in an automobile from Strassburg. No untoward incident occurred.

$52,339 Verdict Against Prince in Stock Deal

A verdict for $52,339.99 was returned today in the Suffolk Superior Court against Frederick H. Prince, banker and broker, who was sued by Oscar M. Chandler, executor of the estate of Mary P. Colburn, to recover securities valued at $23,442 used as collateral in stock transactions. Interest for thirteen years, amounting to $22,595.09, was allowed in addition to the $29,442 in the jury's verdict.

The suit was brought under the stock wagering statute. Mrs. Colburn inherited $250,000 from her husband, who died in 1878. Between that time and 1909 she depleted her fortune to $2,000 except an account with Prince & Co. Mrs. Colburn died in 1903, and Chandler, a nephew, brought suit against Prince for a return of securities delivered by Mrs. Colburn to Prince as margins for stocks purchased and sales made for her account. Chandler alleged that Mrs. Colburn intended there should be no actual purchases or sales.

A jury returned a verdict for Prince. But the full bench ruled last February that the trial judge erred in instructing the jury that the burden of proof was on the plaintiff to establish that there should have been no actual purchase or sales by the defendant. A new trial was ordered.

AUTOIST FREED IN $1,000 BAIL FOR EVERETT TRAGEDY

Joseph F. Donahoe of No. 9 Davis street, Woburn, held by the Everett police on a charge of causing the death of Ilona Glennon, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Glennon of No. 271 Second street, Everett, with an auto, today furnished bonds of $1,000 for his release. Donahoe will be given a hearing in the Everett court May 16.

The little girl was playing in the street with several older companions. Her father witnessed the accident from a window.

Charge Politics Is Behind Pendergast Arrest in Revere

Revere was stirred again today, following the arrest of Charles H. Pendergast, a retired Revere merchant and father of Tax Collector Arthur C. Pendergast, at his home on Shirley street, in that town, on a charge of "working on the Lord's day." In the Chelsea court today the case was filed.

Pendergast's friends today made the charge that "politics" was the cause of the arrest, which they said bore all the "earmarks" of a "political move."

Pendergast's friends said the police had driven a patrol wagon up to the front of the Pendergast home. The usual procedure in similar cases is to use a court summons. The friends of Pendergast declare that his arrest for digging in his garden was due to his activity in the town's finance committee, of which he is a member.

WALTHAM FIRE CHIEF CAPTURES MAN BY TACKLE

George L. Johnson, chief of the Waltham fire department, made a flying tackle and threw Robert Walsh, who attempted to escape from Patrolman John Burke of the Watertown police on the way to the Waltham Court today.

Patrolman Burke and his prisoner, charged with drunkenness, were getting off a car at the corner of Main and Lexington streets. Walsh broke away and sprinted up Main street.

Chief Johnson overtook Walsh and brought him down in a heap.

DOWNEY NAMED FOR COMPTROLLER

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Upon the recommendation of Senators Kern and Shively of Indiana, President Wilson today sent to the Senate the nomination of George E. Downey of Indiana, to be controller of the treasury.

100 NORTH SHORE PLUMBERS STRIKE

One hundred journeymen plumbers of Salem, Beverly, Peabody, Manchester, Beverly Farms and Hamilton went on strike today. They split over an agreement with the North Shore Master Plumbers' Association and the United Association of Plumbers, Steamfitters and Gasfitters. The journeymen demanded a provision by which their pay should be figured by the hour. They demand sixty cents an hour

MACK BROUGHT BACK FOR POSTAL BREAK.

Richard Mack, known to the police as "Massachusetts Dick," was brought to Boston today from Albany, where he was captured by Postoffice Inspector Harry Robinson for connection with robbery of the North Abington postoffice two years ago. He is fifty-two years of age and broken in health owing to long prison terms.

EXPERT SWIMMER DROWNED.

CHICAGO, April 28.—Being an expert swimmer does not always prevent drowning. James Robinson, a sailor, who had the reputation of being the best swimmer on Lake Erie, fell into the Chicago River and was drowned. Another man fell into the river at another point who could not swim and was saved.

TAFT TO PRESIDE FOR UNITARIANS

Former President Taft will preside at the meeting of the American Unitarian Association Wednesday evening, May 21, in Tremont Temple. President Emeritus Eliot will make the principal address.

APPROVE NEILL FOR STATISTICS BOARD

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The Senate Committee on Education and Labor today agreed to report favorably the nomination of Dr. Charles P. Neill to be Commissioner of Labor Statistics.

HUNDREDS IN NARROW ESCAPES

Thirty were injured today in a head-on collision between the 6:33 Braintree local from Boston and a work train near Capen's bridge, in Braintree, on the West Quincy branch of the Boston division of the New Haven road. One coach containing forty-six railroad employes left the tracks and rolled down a fifteen-foot embankment.

THE INJURED.

MISS MARY BURKHART of Whittick place, Quincy, hurt about shoulders and removed to her home.

MISS HELEN BARTONI of No. 74 Crescent street, West Quincy, bruised about the face and body. She was removed to her home.

RAINEY MAKES ATTACK UPON BIG FORTUNES

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The flood of campaign-flavored oratory in the House began to ebb today, and by tonight the speeches will have been exhausted, and tomorrow the House will get down to actual consideration of the Underwood bill under the five-minute rule.

The headline today on the Republican side was Representative Payne of New York, author of the present law, which the Democrats plan to do away with. Payne defended his bill and asserted that the pending Democratic measure would work enough havoc to the industries of the country to assure the return of the Republican House.

Representative Rainey of Illinois, Democratic member of the Ways and Means Committee, defended the income tax and made an attack upon "swollen fortunes."

He declared that swollen fortunes in this country are either based on franchises, protection or patents.

"Few such fortunes, he asserted, had been accumulated except through federal favors of some kind. He referred to the testimony in the Lawrence, Mass., textile strike investigation in support of his contention that manufacturers do not divide protective tariff favors justly with their employes.

"The testimony showed that whole families lived without ever tasting meat," he said. "When they struck and tried to send their children to other cities the police interfered and the strikers were virtually sold to return to work at the wages proposed by the manufacturers or starve. Manufacturers of this sort can get along with less profits."

Rainey said that the Democrats expected, through the income tax, to make the recipients of big incomes do their share towards supporting the government.

Rain Saves Hurley's House from "Fire" of Moving Picture

Mayor Hurley of Salem put an extra shine on his high hat today and opened the front door of his home.

"You may fire when you are ready, boys," he said to the moving picture camera man who had come to burn down his house (with imitation fire). "Shoot!" said the Mayor.

"Sorry, boss, but it's too rainy, too cloudy. Nothing doing today. We go, but we shall return next Wednesday to burn down your house. Good morning."

The Mayor, pretty much broken up that he would have to wait so long to have his house burned down, turned back into the house and finished his breakfast.

The Mayor of Salem had met his match and had been worsted. The old champ, Jup Pluvi, had won out.

Three Men Held Up and South Boston Bakery Is Looted

Three men were held up, robbed and beaten and a bakery was looted in South Boston early today, following a series of twenty holdups and thirty breaks during April.

Two of the men were held up on Dorchester avenue. Their watches and money were taken. About the same time in another section of South Boston another man was robbed and beaten on L street. The goncs withheld all information concerning the holdups.

While the holdup men were at work, Morse's Bakery, No. 110 Dorchester street, near Broadway, was entered. After rifling the cash register, the thieves scattered pies and cakes about the shop.

OLGA BUSCEMI, missing sixteen-year-old North End girl, and Luigi Olivieri with whom, girl's father believes, she ran away.

The police of Philadelphia searched the "Little Italy" district of that city today in a hunt for Olga Buscemi, the sixteen-year-old girl who left her home at No. 192 North street a week ago. Relatives of the girl helped the police in their search for her, say dispatches to the Boston AMERICAN.

Salvatore Buscemi, father of the girl and a well-to-do North End confectioner declares that his daughter ran away with a Roxbury youth, Luigi Olivieri. The father said he would bend every effort to have the youth arrested and brought to trial in Boston. The father said:

"We know that the disappearance was planned. After Olga went away we found that she had taken with her an extra dress, an extra pair of shoes and other things which she must have packed up.

"On the Sunday before she left, April 20, she was very nervous and excited. She had not much to say. She did not see her young man friend. They used to meet in the Friend street station of the tunnel.

"Monday, the day she disappeared, she was supposed to go to the funeral of Gesualdo Turco in Revere, and from there to place flowers in her mother's grave in Malden. She had $100 to deposit in the bank. She never appeared at the funeral.

"I have seen the young man hanging around the store but I never dreamed she would go so far as to leave me."

BRITISH ARMY AVIATOR FALLS TO HIS DEATH

FARNBOROUGH, England, April 28.—Lieutenant Rogers Harrison, an aviator in the British army, was killed by a fall of 400 feet and the Cody biplane which won the $25,000 army prize last year was destroyed.

Lieutenant Harrison, who was one of the most daring aviators in the army, was manoeuvring over the aerodrome when the machine was suddenly seen to stop and hang suspended in the air, then droppitg like a rock.

The biplane was considered one of the best in the world. It was swift and durable, and experts are at a loss to account for the cause of the accident.

SCHOONER HITS ON ROCKS OFF LODGE'S HOUSE

The two-masted Nova Scotia schooner Frances A. Rice, 167 tons, went ashore early today in United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge's front yard at Nahant.

Captain William Cleveland and the four members of her crew were rescued with difficulty by the lifesavers, led by Captain George Wickens, after a long search through the thick fog in a lifeboat.

The lifesavers were guided only by the frantic cries for help of the men aboard the schooner, which lies on the rocks of Saunders' Ledge, breaking rapidly to pieces under the heavy waves.

The beach patrolmen passing along the sands in front of the Lodge mansion heard the schooner strike with a crash, and then heard the outcries of the crew. Running to the nearest telephone, he called up the lifesaving station.

POPE HAS SLIGHT RELAPSE, CAUSED BY OVER FATIGUE

ROME, April 28.—The Pope has suffered a slight relapse today, caused by over fatigue. This setback his physician attributes to his having stayed out of bed more than six hours Saturday with the result that he passed a sleepless, agitated night.

The Pope's doctors say his recovery is retarded by the wet, dismal weather. However, they permitted him to pass a couple of hours in an arm chair in his bedroom Sunday afternoon.

Cardinal Merry Del Val, Papal Secretary of State, will not yet allow any of the cardinals to visit the Pontiff, for his physicians say that at the very beginning his illness was the outcome of extreme depression over the trend of grave ecclesiastical affairs.

20,000 OBSERVE GREEK EASTER

At the First Christian Church, Tyler and Kneeland streets, and at the Winchester Street Church, more than 20,000 Greeks, Russians, Servians, Armenians, Syrians, Montenegrins, Bulgarians, Albanians and some Abyssinians celebrated the Greek Easter Sunday.

"To Shock World" If Mrs. Pankhurst Is Jailed Again

LONDON, April 28.—If Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader, is returned to Holloway jail to complete the three years' sentence imposed upon her for inciting other women to violence, reprisals such as will shock the world will be made.

This was the threat hurled at the British public by the Women's Social and Political Union, of which Mrs. Pankhurst is the president.

Mrs. Pankhurst, who is still in a nursing home in Bayswater, in consequence of a hunger strike, passed a comfortable night and showed improvement today.

So far she has ignored representations of Home Secretary McKenna that he will remove all restrictions from Mrs. Pankhurst if she will voluntarily return to prison when she recovers her health.

34 AWAITING FOR HAYWOOD ARE PUT IN PATERSON JAIL

PATERSON, N. J., April 28.—Thirty-four strike pickets were arrested for unlawful assemblage here today, while thousands of striking silk millworkers gathered at the railroad station to await the arrival of William D. Haywood, the I. W. W. leader, to submit to arrest following his indictment for inciting a riot. All those arrested were held for trial or examination.

The police fooled the waiting throng, however, when they arrested Haywood on the train at Passaic and rushed him to the Passaic County jail by automobile. A through train for Chicago was halted by the mob. The police charged upon them driving them back and the train passed on. Then the train on which it was assumed that Haywood was coming rolled into the station. Immediately the crowd rushed toward the train, but were driven back by the police.

The situation was becoming serious when a police sergeant forced Miss Elizabeth Gurley Flynn upon a truck and she informed the strikers that Haywood was already in jail.

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edward after 17 years of study with his patients.

These Olive Tablets act on the bowels—yet have no oily taste. They are a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil.

If you want a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days, you must get at the cause. Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after-effects. They start the bile and overcome constipation. That's why millions of boxes are sold annually at 10c and 25c per box.

Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results.

MISS MULHALL AND SHEVLINS ARE ARRAIGNED

Miss Margaret Mulhall, a New York dressmaker, and Terence L. Shevlin and his wife of Somerville, charged with smuggling costly dress goods into this port, were allowed to go on their personal recognizances by Judge Morton in the United States District Court today.

Miss Mulhall pleaded not guilty to the indictments charging smuggling. At the suggestion of Assistant United States District Attorney Garland, Miss Mulhall, who was not able to furnish the $1,000 bail asked, was placed on her personal recognizance. Mr. Garland acted on advices of the woman's financial standing received from Assistant United States District Attorney Whitney of New York.

When Shevlin, a customs house clerk and former acting deputy collector, and his wife were called, Mr. Garland gave notice that Attorney John P. Feeney, counsel for Shevlin, was about to file demurrers to the indictments.

Mr. Garland suggested that as Mr. and Mrs. Shevlin were already under $2,000 bail, they be allowed to go on their personal recognizances until the hearing of the demurrers next Monday.

Mr. Garland said: "On account of the four indictments against Mr. Shevlin, all of a serious nature, I would suggest that bail be fixed for Mr. Shevlin at $500 and for Mrs. Shevlin at $2,500."

Attorney John F. Lynch, counsel for Mrs. Shevlin, said that $2,500 was agreeable to him, but he could not speak for Attorney Feeney, Mr. Shevlin's counsel. The matter of additional bail will be arranged at the hearing Monday.

MRS. ELVERTON R. CHAPMAN, society leader, who says that the newer industrial order has robbed women of all of the things they once did to be useful and happy.

The only way women will ever get back to doing the things they once did to be useful and happy is through the suffrage movement, says Mrs. Elverton R. Chapman, society leader, noted wit and as well known in European capitals as in New York and Chicago.

Mrs. Chapman claims the new industrial order has got women in its grip. To get back to her ancient status as a worker Mrs. Chapman says woman will have to keep busy. Suffrage offers her this chance for her activities, she says.

Mrs. Chapman practices what she preaches. She has just taken a real estate bonigess away from her husband and two business partners because she thought they were not running it properly.

Before she became Mrs. Chapman, she was the widow of John L. Nelson, of Chicago, and she was one of the most prominent figures in society.

"The first generation or two," says Mrs. Chapman, getting away from the real estate business, "have found that conditions surrounding womankind have completely changed. Machinery had been invented that took away the work of the grandmother and robbed woman of the important part she played industrially at home.

"What she once had to make is now made in factories, and the industrial system has completely changed the aspect of home life. As it has done so the old occupations of the grandmothers have been removed as possibilities for the younger generations.

"That leaves the women idle, and women cannot be idle and be happy. They must have some outlet for their activities, mental and industrial, for that reason I think that suffrage will be a great benefit, because it will start women to thinking until they see just what the present day situation is and what they can do with the things now possible for their efforts.

RICH MERCHANT BURIED AT SEA

Baptist P. Elerro, forty-four, a rich merchant who was returning home to Turin, Italy, from a business trip in Central America, died on board the United Fruit Company's steamer Limon, while enroute from Port Limon to Boston, on April 21, and was buried at sea. The Limon docked in Boston today. Several hundred dollars in cash were found among his effects together with a draft for a large amount of money made out to his wife.

Professor George Nelson of Harvard, who has been collecting botanical specimens on Swan Island for the Agassiz Museum at Harvard, returned on the Limon.

CRITICS GATHER ROUND TO VIEW CUBIST "ART"

The Cubists, futurists or post-impressionists, as they are variously named, opened an exposition of their pictures in Copley Hall today under the joint auspices of the Association of American Painters and the Copley Society of Boston.

Some of the epithets applied by those who obtained a first view of the Cubist pictures were "dizzy," "childish," "plain bosh," "babyish caricatures," "color dunks" and "insults to real art."

Boston obtains the possible pleasure of viewing the same so-called paintings which have attracted so much attention in Chicago and New York, the most of it unfavorable. But all unfavorable criticisms, the Cubists companionly declare, is because the critics don't understand.

The Copley Society is made up of Boston artists who have for the most part achieved even more than a moderate measure of fame. These artists, while presenting the pictures under their direction, have felt it necessary to disclaim any intention of standing sponsors for the style of "art" represented, or even to admit that it is more than mere grotesque daubing.

Henri Matisse, Francis Picabia, Villon, Othon Friesz, Van Gogh, Pierre Girlend, Alexandre Blanchet, Henri Hossenu and other Cubists have liberal showings.

Last, but not least, is Duchamp's much discussed "Nude Descending a Staircase," which looks like a microscopic enlargement of snow crystals.

Whatever may be said against the Cubist showing at Copley Hall, one thing must be admitted in its favor. That is that it is fairly representative, for it embraces canvas work by nearly all the Cubist painters.

MISSING ROXBURY WOMAN IS FOUND

Mrs. Johanna Burke, seventy-five, of No. 1,634 Tremont street, Roxbury, who was reported to the police last night as missing, was found by officers of the Langrange street station today wandering about streets of the downtown section. She was taken home. Mrs. Burke started for the 10:30 mass in the Mission Church yesterday with Miss Jane Welch, a woman seven years younger, who acts as a companion. They became separated on the church floor and Mrs. Burke disappeared.

AVIATOR FLIES 1,000 MILES IN 24 HOURS

KOLLUM, Holland, April 28.—A distance of nearly 1,000 miles in an air line was flown in an aeroplane yesterday and today by the French aviator, Ernest Francois Guillaux, who made only two stops during his flight. He started from Biarritz, in the extreme southwest of France, at 4:42 a. m. Sunday, and arrived here early today, having descended only twice to replenish his fuel.

WOMEN BRAVER, SAYS DR. MYERS

"We are all cowardly in the face of death, and the men are more cowardly than the women," stated the Rev. Cortland Myers, D. D., before 2,500 people at Tremont Temple. "I am a great friend of the ladies," he continued, "and I would like them better if they would wear small hats."

RAMONA BORDEN,

daughter of New York millionaire, reclaimed in Boston by her father on Saturday.

Although Ramona Borden, the seventeen-year-old daughter of Gail Borden, the millionaire milk man, is in her father's custody, and with him is speeding towards Baltimore, where Mr. Borden's aged mother lies dying, she proclaimes in the near future to be the central figure in a legal battle, for her mother is now on her way from Los Angeles, seeking possession of the girl.

Mrs. Borden is said to have stated before leaving her California home, where she has lived since her separation from her husband, that Ramona's flight with Mrs. Helen Seldon White convinces her that the young girl needs a mother's care.

FRIEDMANN IS DEFENDED BY DOCTORS

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 28.—Several local doctors have condemned the resolution passed by the Rhode Island Medical Society denouncing Dr. Friedmann.

Dr. William L. Harris, chairman of the State Board of Health, said: "The special meeting of the Rhode Island Medical Society was called for the purpose of hearing an address by Dr. Charles F. Stokes, Surgeon-General of the United States Army. No paper was read on section, as I understand it, was permissible at the meeting. The attack on Dr. Friedmann I consider cowardly.

"If the Friedmann cure is less than has been claimed for it, we will find it out in due time. Dr. Friedmann has been accused of accepting fees. I know of no doctor today who is working solely for charity.

"Every man in the medical profession who has done anything in the last ten years has been assailed just as Dr. Friedmann has been assailed."

Dr. G. W. Dwinnell, the recognized authority on the Friedmann cure in this State, said:

"I think it was very unfair to get the members together under the pretext of a special meeting, and then rush this action through without giving the Friedmann supporters any chance to prepare a defence.

"There will be a meeting of the Providence Medical Society next Monday. I predict that quite a different action will be taken at that meeting."

BRYAN AT SACRAMENTO FINDS JOHNSON HOSTILE ON JAPANESE QUESTION

SACRAMENTO, Cal., April 28.—Governor Hiram Johnson met William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State, when he arrived in Sacramento at 6 a. m. today.

Secretary Bryan entered an automobile with the Governor and was driven to the executive mansion, where the two breakfasted.

"I had a pleasant trip, but have no plans to discuss," was Mr. Bryan's response to questions of the newspapermen.

Secretary Bryan realizes that he has a stiff fight on his hands. Even his host, Governor Johnson, is opposed to the Bryan view of the Japanese question. Governor Johnson is supporting the legislators who desire the passage of the anti-alien land bill. The executive believes that the majority of residents of the State want the Japanese excluded.

"Only two things can solve the legislature," said Assemblyman Benedict of Los Angeles, "first, war; second, the assurance of President Wilson through Secretary Bryan that a Federal act will be passed achieving the results sought by California."

After Secretary Bryan and Governor Johnson had finished breakfast Mr. Bryan announced he was ready to begin arranging conferences with leaders of the various factions of the Legislature, so that he could explain at length the position of the federal government and the dangers which the passage of a drastic anti-Japanese bill by the California Legislature will entail to the country.

Conferences with Leaders.

Governor Johnson told Mr. Bryan that the Japanese question had been absorbing time to the exclusion of all other business.

"See these," said the Governor, sweeping his hand toward his desk, which was piled high with letters and telegrams. "These all relate to the Japanese situation. Of course, I have been unable to obtain more than a gist of the contents."

Governor Johnson, it is reported, explained to Mr. Bryan that the people of the East and the Middle West could not appreciate how vital the Japanese question was to the Pacific coast. He told the Secretary of State that there was an overwhelming sentiment in California in favor of passing a bill prohibiting Japanese from owning land in the State.

Before the arrival of Mr. Bryan, Governor Johnson had held conferences with leaders and adopted a program to be pursued during the visit of the Secretary of State. They arranged their argument in the most effective way. The amendment framed by Senator Thompson, allowing Japanese three-year leases instead of outright ownership of land, does not suit Mr. Bryan, but, on the other hand, it is not satisfactory to the radicals either.

Many Protests Received.

Governor Johnson admitted that protests had been received, chiefly from business interests. The Los Angeles board of trade asked that the bill be dropped because it feared that business would be hurt by it. Manufacturing interests asked that the bill be killed because of fears that Japanese will declare a boycott on United States goods.

The text of the message sent by Colonel Theodore Roosevelt to Governor Johnson has been carefully guarded, but it is reported that the former President called upon the Governor to recommend to the Legislature that a resolution addressed to the federal government be passed, calling upon the President of the United States to have Congress pass a bill similar to that now pending in the Legislature here.

President David Starr Jordan of Leland Stanford University, said that he came here at Mr. Bryan's request and would "play his part." Dr. Jordan said he favored a gentleman's agreement between nations.

Tokio dispatches say that the Japanese Parliament today decided to send Ehara Soroku, member of the House of Lords, to Sacramento as a representative of the government, with a view to establishing a better mutual understanding with the Californians. The special envoy plans to leave Tokio about May 10.

MAKES YOUR BACKACHE VANISH, DRIVES RHEUMATIC PAINS AWAY

Eases Stiff, Sore, Swollen Joints and Muscles, Relieving Backache and Bladder Disorders After Few Doses Are Taken

This is what Croxone, the new scientific discovery, does for sufferers of such troubles. It promptly relieves these diseases because it reaches the cause. It soaks right into the walls and linings of the kidneys and cleans out the stopped-up, inactive organs like water does a sponge—neutralizes and dissolves every particle of uric acid and makes the kidneys sift from the blood all the waste matter and poisons that lodge in the joints and muscles to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism. It soothes and heals the delicate linings of the bladder and leaves the kidneys in a clean, strong, healthy condition, so they can filter the blood and keep it well.

If you suffer from backache—have pains in the neck or sides—nervous or dizzy spells—a few doses of Croxone will relieve the congestion and you will be surprised how quickly all kidney, bladder and rheumatic troubles will disappear.

Croxone is different from all other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case.

CITIZEN CHOATE NOW ATTORNEY FOR MR. MELLEN

Attorney Charles F. Choate, who sold he was as a plain "citizen" last week on his first appearance at the Interstate Commerce Commissioners' investigation of the New Haven Railroad, today announced that he is attending the hearing as the personal counsel for President Mellen of the New Haven.

The announcement caused a stir among the spectators in the room in the Federal Building, where the hearing is under way before Examiner Ward Prouty of the commission.

Attorney Choate stated that he had made a formal entry with Examiner Prouty of having been retained by President Mellen. The announcement came in response to questions from an AMERICAN reporter, who asked Attorney Choate point blank if he was acting as counsel for the New Haven.

"Oh, I am here as personal counsel for Mr. Mellen," said the lawyer. It is at his request. I filed my formal entry of appearance today."

"How about being here as a plain citizen," as you stated last week?" Mr. Choate was asked.

"Well, this is just additional," he replied.

Mr. Mellen His Client.

"Were you retained by Mr. Mellen as the result of any change in the nature of this investigation?"

"Oh, no; not at all. Mr. Mellen is just a new client of mine. I am getting clients all the time, and am glad to get them. One of my associates here informed me today that there are fully as many citizens in this city who wish me to represent them as have asked Mr. Brandeis—perhaps more.

"When did Mr. Mellen ask you to appear as his personal counsel, Mr. Choate?"

"Oh, I had a talk with him yesterday."

"Then this is a new entry of appearance for you?"

"I wouldn't put it just that way. Just say it is another entry. One more client."

"It is True," Says Brandeis.

"Let me examine the witness in my own way," said Mr. Brandeis. "Mr. Choate can have his own later. Time is being wasted by his continual objections."

Vice-President Buckland charged that Mr. Brandeis was bringing out "something that is not true" by his comparisons of the New Haven's total capitalizations of 1903 and 1912.

"It is the truth, Mr. Buckland," said Mr. Brandeis.

"It is not true," said the New Haven official.

"I say that it is true," retorted Mr. Brandeis. "I wish you would let Mr. Brown testify. You can cross-examine him later."

Choate Admits Error.

Auditor Brown testified that the gross income of the New Haven and its subsidiaries in June 30, 1903, was $47,206,077.51, and on June 30, 1912, $67,359,218.56, or 42 per cent. increase in gross revenue in nine years.

Mr. Choate and Mr. Buckland raised the point that the steam and water lines were separate in 1903. Mr. Brandeis showed by a report for that year both water and land lines were lumped.

Mr. Brown stated that the total capitalization of the New Haven and subsidiaries was $376,557,080 or 400 per cent. increase of capitalization, and nearly ten times as much as the gross revenue.

Mr. Choate tried to show Mr. Brown was wrong in his figures, but later admitted Mr. Brown was right and he himself was wrong.

Warns Hub Girls Against Mystics from the Orient

"Be careful of the Back Bay Vedanta philosophy and the swamis who are going about to teach it," was what Rustom Rustomjee, the Parsee from India, editor of the Oriental Review, published in California, told the Unitarian ministers in Channing Hall today.

"Why, these swamis come over here and do things that they would not dare to do in India. They are not real kawmis. They are in New York and Boston fooling the people.

"Some of these swamis are only young men, and one that I know of is but twenty-six years old. Yet they are trying to get control over the young people in the Back Bay. They are making out of the young women in Boston no more than we make out of the dancing girls of India. They should be watched."

RUTLAND FLYER WRECK TRACED TO SPREADING RAILS

MIDDLEBURY, Vt., April 28.—Spreading rails are believed to have caused the wreck of the north-bound flyer on the Rutland railroad near Belden's Station, four miles north of here, last night, six persons being injured in one of the parlor cars when it went down a ten-foot embankment. No lives were lost. The train was running about forty miles an hour. The track was torn up for nearly 300 yards. Two of the derailed cars rested on the Brookville bridge, ninety six feet above the water.

BOSTON DISPENSARY OPENS EYE CLINIC

An evening eye clinic has been established by the eye department of the Boston Dispensary. The clinic will be opened at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday evening at the Dispensary building, No. 25 Bennet street, and will be continued on Tuesdays thereafter from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock. The clinic will aim to meet the need of the large number of persons who are able to pay something for the eye services which they require, but who cannot afford an oculist's regular fee.

MRS. RANDOLPH, HELD FOR THEFT, IS A MYSTERY

The Boston police are today investigating the stealing of expensive mesh bags from Boston women to find out if a mysterious woman known as "Mrs Pitzhugh Randolph," now in the New York city tombs, can be accused in this city.

"Mrs. Randolph" is one of the strangest women the police of big cities have ever dealt with. She claims relationship with the famous Randolph family of Virginia. She is said to have taken only the most expensive jeweled mesh bags. For the ordinary purse or costly leather handbag she had no use. She claims her family have paid Abraham Levy, the New York lawyer, $10,000 to defend her.

"It's glowed to say I stole mesh bags," says Mrs. Fitzhugh Randolph to the AMERICAN. "I belong to the 'Fighting Randolphs of Virginia,' and when my case goes to trial my real and unquestioned standing will be known. I was married in a convent, and after graduation married Fitzhugh Randolph.

"In 1911 a married Alfred S. Northrup, a government lawyer and we have a son fifteen months old. We separated before the baby was born and I have since lived in New York.

Abraham Levy says Mrs. Randolph's father is prominent in Pensacola, Fla., and employed him to defend his daughter.

MAN BETTER AFTER THIRD SUICIDE TRY

Jacob Newlander, fifty-four, of No. 3 Grove str., West End, is recovering today from his third attempt at suicide within a few months. In the latest attempt Max Goldberg, a visitor, found Newlander and the latter's son, Myer, three, both unconscious.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRIGON.

While the effort to obtain National government participation in the highways progress of the country accumulates force, the various States, one after another, are adopting legislation providing for the establishment of State highway departments. According to information received by the A. A. A. National Good Roads Board, which keeps in touch with the State automobile bodies and aids materially in their work, there will be, as a result of recent legislative action, road departments in Maine, Montana, Missouri, Colorado, Idaho, Arkansas and Texas. This makes plainly apparent that the move for federal action has not caused any "laying down" on the part of the States, which have their proper part to perform in the general roads development.

The 1914 models of the American underslung cars have begun to arrive in Boston. The first of these is now being shown by the Marion Motor Sales Company. It is a six-cylinder car with electric lights and self-starter. It is a four-passenger car, which does away with the bulging body and makes the lines decidedly graceful.

A noticeable feature of the 1914 American car is the decrease in the size of the wheel, which adds to the beauty of the car. Frank Roberts, who is interested in the Marion Motor Sales Company, is enthusiastic over the new 1914 American, and has pulled down a number of orders in the few days that he has been able to show the car.

GIRLS PINNED UNDER WRECKAGE OF BOSTON TRAIN AT BRAINTREE

The last six were all on the work train. Nearly 200 other persons were in the wreck.

Both Engineers Heroes.

That none was killed was due to the heroism of the engineers of the two trains. At the time the passenger train was making ten miles an hour. The workstrain, which was late, was going northward at faster speed. As the workstrain passed a sharp curve near the bridge, Engineer Glidden saw the passenger train through the fog. He applied the emergency brakes and with Fireman Ford leaped from the cab.

About the same moment Engineer Dutton saw the work train. He applied the air brakes and jumped, with Fireman Jackson. Dutton landed on his head in a ditch and was knocked unconscious. The brakes slowed up the trains, but both engines were telescoped.

There were five coaches on the passenger train. None of these left the track. On the train were about 100 girls and fifty men. There were seventy-five employes on the workstrain.

Girls Pinned Under a Door.

In the passenger coaches men and girls were thrown from their seats. Two girls —Misses Lizzie Conway and Mary Burkhart—were pinned under a door which was torn from its fastenings. The girls shrieked, and for a few minutes there was great confusion.

The narrowest escapes were those of the forty-six workmen in the overturned baggage and passenger coach attached to the workstrain locomotive. The roof of this coach was torn off as it rolled down the embankment. It was almost a miracle that the men escaped serious injuries.

Telephone operators in the Braintree exchange summoned physicians. From Quincy were dispatched the police ambulance and patrol wagon manned by police reserves. Most of the men and girl passengers were shoe operatives on their way to work at the Rice & Hutchins plant and other factories in Braintree.

A wrecking car sent from the South station reached the wreck scene and cleared away the wreckage. An official investigation was started to fix the blame. It was explained that the workstrain was behind time on its way to a gravel pit a quarter of a mile north of the bridge. The officials refused to state whether or not there had been a confusion of signals. The workstrain consisted of the engine, the overturned coach and a tool car.

Joseph Snyder, a passenger in the second coach of the passenger train, described his experiences as follows:

"The first I knew was when the brakes were applied. There was a jolt. An instant later came a grinding crash. I heard the screams of the two girls pinned under the door. Thirty girls in the car in which I sat shrieked as they were hurled from their seats. It was remarkable that none was killed. We were thrown in a heap. Some went clear over their seats."

Girls in a Panic.

Joseph Gibbs, a passenger in the third coach of the passenger train, said:

"The crash occurred at 8:37 o'clock. The third car was filled with men and girls. Immediately after grinding jar when the brakes were applied came the crash. We were thrown here, there and everywhere. The shrieks of the girls continued for several minutes. I don't see how it happened that none was killed."

Madam, Does Your Husband Drink?

Hundreds of Wives Now Keeping Their Husbands Sober

There is no excuse for letting a man come home week after week with only half his wages. His money needn't go to the rumseller and his family go hungry or do without suitable clothes.

If he won't quit drinking of his own free will, give him Renova—the tasteless, harmless, secret remedy that has won hundreds of men back to sobriety and brings happiness to the whole family. Just put a little Renova in his tea, coffee, soups, etc., and after awhile he'll be like a new man. Get a package of Renova at Riker-Jaynes and try it. If you follow the directions faithfully and it doesn't help him, get your money back.

If you'd like to try it—free—before you buy a dollar package, write in confidence to the Renova Co., 324 Broadway, New York, for a sample and proofs of what Renova does for victims of intemperance.

NEW YORK, April 28.—The Red Sox were out to make it two straight victories over the New York Yanks on today. Stahl's men realize that they will have to play championship ball from now on if they are to win the American League pennant this year.

Connie Mack's athletics are playing a slashing game and if they obtain a big lead early in the season it will be a difficult task for the Red Sox to beat them out in the final dash for the wire.

The Yankees have experienced a great deal of hard luck this season, but were determined to take today's game. Frank Chance will probably use Ray Keating on the mound today. This sensational young hurler has already humbled the world's champions once this season, while he has also taken the measure of the Athletics. If he pitches this afternoon the Red Sox will have to play a rattling good game if they are to finish in front.

The Boston pitchers have not shown good form this year. The men seem unable to go the entire distance of nine innings. Ray Collins may pitch today. Collins has not done very well this year, but Stahl believes that he is now in shape to do his best work. There is also a possibility that O'Brien or Hall may pitch.

Joe Wood's thumb is still in poor condition. He, however, refuses to obey his doctor and take a much needed rest. He was hit on the injured finger in practice Friday and this has not done him any good. It is expected that it will be fully two weeks before the speed king will be in perfect condition again. Wood is anxious to get into the game and it would not be surprising if he should pitch in one of the games against the Yankees.

BLANCHARD IS PROFESSIONAL TRACK COACH

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

(Quarter-mile Champion of United States and Canada.)

To the many athletic followers throughout New England the announcement that Vaughn S. Blanchard, the former Bates College track team captain, has joined the ranks of professional athletes will be received with a great deal of surprise and particularly to the members of the Boston Athletic Association; for up to the present time none of the officials connected with that club is aware of Blanchard's status.

Blanchard is, and has been for the past three weeks, the coach of the Hartford High School track team. He is receiving a salary for this work and is therefore unable to compete again in the amateur ranks.

Was Star at Bates.

Blanchard first came into prominence while attending Bates College, Maine. He attracted attention by his fine work as a hurdler and was elected track captain in his senior year. He won many events while in college. During the Summer months he represented the Boston Athletic Association and it was while running for the Back Bay Club that the Maine athlete attracted so much attention for in the Fall of 1912 he won the junior national 110-yard hurdles, defeating a fast field. He also won a place in the senior event on the following day.

On returning to college, he started to prepare himself for the Olympic tryouts in the Harvard Stadium which were held last June. At the New England college championships he was forced to take second honors to Wendell, the Wesleyan hurdler. This did not faise the Bates captain, however, for two weeks later when the tryouts were held in the Harvard Stadium Blanchard startled the critics by winning the high hurdle race from Wendell and Eller besides many other athletes of note.

Competed in Olympics.

He was immediately picked as a sure place winner in the meet that was to take place a month later in the city of Stockholm. Unfortunately for him he was unable to place, but his work was very gratifying to the American contingent that witnessed the games. When Blanchard graduated from Bates last year he entered the Springfield Y. M. C. A. training school. Three weeks ago he signed a contract to coach the Hartford High School track team. He is one of the youngest track coaches in the East and his many friends in athletic circles wish him the best of luck in his new position.

Right Off the Bat

By RILEY.

NEW YORK, Philadelphia and Washington baseball writers agree unanimously that the Red Sox are not playing with nearly the dash, smoothness or finish which won the pennant for them last year. These writers are already searching elsewhere for a flag winner. Not having seen any of the Western teams in action they qualify their selections, but they seem inclined to favor Connie Mack to "come back."

• • •

HERE in Boston, where the base ball writers have been accustomed to see the Sox day after day, the critics of the game are not in such a hurry to throw up the sponge. Stahl's red-hosed champions produced some very ragged games last season, some of them quite as raw as those which have kept them down near the foot of the ladder this year. But they used to save up all of their bad baseball until they had quite a collection thereof, and then dump it all into one game. Early in the season they were unloading in this fashion about once in every three games. Later they deferred it until the fourth, and finally until the fifth game. By this stretching process they got away with less.

• • •

THE fact is, the Sox played on their "nerve" all last year, and there were necessary reactions at almost regular intervals, which accounted for the "off days." These breakdowns helped rather than hindered the Sox in their upward movement. They prevented the champions from falling into any long slumps. The "champs" never won any long stretches of games, nor did they have any slumps of more than one day's duration in 1912. They won the pennant by taking, first, two in every three games; then three in every four, and finally four in every five, holding just about that gait in nearly all of the series they played—except, of course, with the Yankees and Browns, and with them they averaged from time to time for a "clean-up."

• • •

THE American League season of 1912 started a week later than that of 1913. But poor weather has robbed the teams of the benefit of the early beginning and, on the whole, they have played few more games than they had a year ago at this time. The standing on May 1, 1912, was:

	W.	L.	P.C.		W.	L.	P.C.
Chicago	11	5	.733	Athletics	7	7	.500
Boston	9	5	.643	Detroit	6	10	.375
Washington	9	6	.600	St. Louis	5	10	.357
Cleveland	7	9	.438	New York	3	10	.231

The standing today is:

	W.	L.	P.C.		W.	L.	P.C.
Athletics	9	2	.818	St. Louis	7	9	.437
Cleveland	10	4	.714	Boston	7	8	.385
Washington	7	6	.700	Detroit	6	9	.357
Chicago	8	9	.500	New York	2	10	.182

• • •

THE following monthly table of victories and defeats shows how consistently the Sox worked throughout last season, and gives an idea of the handicap they must make up to get into the race this year:

	W.	L.		W.	L.
May	15	7	August	20	9
June	20	10	Sept.	16	9
July	23	10	Oct.	2	1

They finished with 105 games won and 47 lost. Their nearest competitor, Washington, won 91 and lost 61. But experience shows that fifty defeats in a season is close to all a team can stand, as a rule, and get away with the pennant.

• • •

THE Giants won 103 and lost 48 in less pefe. The Pirates won 93, lost 58, and finished second. Barney Dreyfuss had great hopes of reversing this order this season. But luck has been against him. With Wagner out of the game; Gibson, his star catcher, laid up, and other players laid off from time to time, Dreyfuss is having plenty of adversity—more than his share, in fact. Two years ago he had a great chance to cop the flag, but at the critical moment Wagner broke an ankle, and it was all off. This year, however, in spite of his troubles, Dreyfuss is off to a flying start. His Pirates are right up there behind the Giants.

• • •

MCGRAW has had the advantage to date in having a team free of illness and accident, and of playing all of his games against the perennially weak Pilgrims and Dodgers and weak-hitting Phillies, while Dreyfuss has had to trade with the Cubs. But the Pirates have had some unexpected assistance in finding Cincinnati which started last season with a marvelous sprint, in the rock this year.

• • •

IN Philadelphia the "fans" are already talking about settling the world's championship right at home in Pennsylvania—between the Athletics and the Pirates. But in Philadelphia they have little to talk about except that and the weather.

BALTIMORE LIFTS BASEBALL LID, BUT RAIN HALTS GAME

BALTIMORE, April 28.—For the first time in many years an effort to play a championship baseball game in this vicinity on Sunday was made yesterday. It was frustrated early by a heavy downpour of rain, which put a stop to play between the Baltimore and Buffalo clubs of the International League at the end of the second inning, with the score 3 to 2.

Formerly county police did not interfere with these games as long as no admission fee was charged, but the baseball people saw that every one who got in purchased a fan or something to eat for what the regular price of admission was charged.

Today, however, regular tickets with rain checks were sold and the police did not interfere. A large crowd was present.

WELSH IN BOUT TONIGHT.

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., April 28.—Freddie Welsh, lightweight champion of England, will meet Al Ketchel, the local pride, in a ten-round bout tonight. Ketchel recently disposed of "Young Jack" O'Brien of Philadelphia.

Dooin Admits Phillies Lucky

Quaker Head Has Flag Hopes

By L. R. MURDOCH.

William Locke, who left the post of secretary for the Pirates to assume Horace Fogel's chair in Philadelphia, admits that his team has been overburdened with good luck thus far. Witness particularly the game that New York won but was ruled a scoreless tie because Umpire Bill Klem failed to see "Monk the Moose" McCormick's successful pinch hit.

Also notice the fact that "Moose" came back Saturday with a three-bagger to a pinch and the umpire saw it, but this time Brooklyn was the victim. And, notwithstanding all this, the Giants lost. Moreover, chalk up all those 1 to 0 games that Locke's men carried away from Brooklyn.

"We have had a lot of luck," Locke confessed. "But we're playing good baseball, too, and we're getting the best and most uniformly good pitching in either league."

Phillies Long for First Place.

The Phillies wouldn't be surprised to be in first place May 1. Of course, it goes without saying that they count on picking up two more games here, and they hope that Brooklyn, which is playing exceptionally fast baseball, for the Dodgers, will take another game from the Giants.

They base this hope principally on "Lefty" Allen, Dahlen's pitching "find," who hung it on McGraw for one deserved victory and on "Nap" Rucker, who pitched to six Giants in two innings Saturday. They expect Rucker to pitch a full game against the Giants this week and Allen to take care of another. Between these two it is not unreasonable for the Phillies to expect Brooklyn to win at least one game.

Should these events come to pass, as per scuedule outlined above, the Giants and Phillies would face each other next Thursday at Philadelphia, even Stephen in the percentage column. Then the Phillies would uncork their star pitching staff against the Giants on the home grounds, with a reasonable expectation—in their own opinion—of wresting the lead away from the Giants. This "dope," of course, takes no account of what the Pirates may do in the meantime.

Importance of Protested Games.

Under the circumstances, the importance of the two New York games which the Phillies have protested, may be appreciated. The Quakers intend to show that on April 28 and 24, when they were beaten at the Polo Grounds, there was a hole three inches deep back of the pitchers' slab and they declare that this is clearly against the rules and sufficient justification for the annulment of the two games.

The Phillies' pitchers say that the hole bothered them exceedingly because they were in constant fear of stepping into it and injuring themselves. Consequently they were unable to devote their attentions and their energies exclusively to flinging the horsehide. They do not care whether the same hole bothered the New York pitchers or not. That was the Giants' own business, they say. If the excavation troubled them, they could easily have had it filled.

Not being possessed of psychological penetration, or the gift of reading minds, we will not attempt to say what might have happened if the Phillies had won the two games mentioned. Did we possess the guileless illusions of youth we could imagine Mr. Locke and his colleagues presenting themselves before President Lynch of the National League and saying:

Dear Mr. Lynch, we want to call your attention to something about the two games we won in New York. The field was not laid out according to rules, which may have accounted for much of the adversities of the Giants. We scorn to take advantage of our competitors. We are sportsmen. Moreover, we believe what we were taught in early youth—that honesty is the best policy. Therefore we decline to accept those victories and we leave your august presence, firmly convinced that by reason of this honorable course, fate will ordain that we win the pennant. We are convinced, too, that if we did not take this course, fate would frown upon us and we would suffer in consequence. Or, in the event of Philadelphia having won, we might imagine Johnny McGraw, saying: "What? Take advantage of that technicality? Not on your life! If we can't win a pennant without doing that, we refuse to win."

It would be just like McGraw.

PILGRIMS-QUAKERS GAME CALLED OFF ON ACCOUNT OF RAIN

Shortly after noon today the management of the National League Club called off the second game between the Phillies and Pilgrims because of rain. Today's postponed game will be part of a double-header to be played here on June 21.

Contradictory to the report from New York yesterday that President Gaffney of the Pilgrims was in a serious condition, Secretary Herman Nickerson received word from the New York office today that the condition of the Pilgrims' head was very much improved.

GALLANT MEETS BAT NELSON IN BOUT AT ARENA

By JACK CONWAY.

Boston will get back on the boxing map tomorrow evening when Battling Nelson and Gilbert Gallant exchange punches in a twelve-round bout at the new Atlas A. A., which has obtained quarters at the Boston Arena. There has not been a glove contest staged in this city since last Fall and a large crowd of fight "fans" is expected to turn out in order to witness the opening show of the Atlas Club.

Nelson has a small sized army of followers in Boston and they are sure to give the Durable Dane a fine reception when he crawls through the ropes. "Bat" is one of the most popular boxers in the business. For sixteen long years he has been earning his livelihood by the power of his fists and during that time he has never performed a dishonest act in order to make sure of winning a battle.

Bat Still Aggressive Fighter.

The Hegewisch Mod is no longer a champion or even a near champion. There are many lightweights who are capable of defeating the Battler. There is not, however, a man willing or aggressive fighter in the ring today than Nelson.

"Bat's" courage is as great now as it ever was. They do not make 'em any gamer than Nelson.

Mrs. Battling Nelson is in Boston with her husband. She is certain that the Dane will defeat Gallant.

It was reported several months ago that Mrs. Nelson was planning to bring a suit for divorce against her husband. After this story had become "stale," it was announced that "Bat's" matrimonial partner had buried the hatchet and had wired the Battler to come home.

The writer always looked upon the divorce story with suspicion. John R. Robertson, as clever a press agent as ever came over the pike, is Nelson's manager, and can it be possible that John suggested the divorce story in order to keep Nelson's name before the public?

Gallant Rugged Boxer.

In Gallant, Nelson will meet one of the best lightweights in New England. Gilbert is a real fighter and will keep Nelson busy all of the time. This is the most important bout of his career, and if he can defeat the former lightweight champion, he will be in great demand by boxing promoters.

Joe Eagan meets Terry Brooks in another twelve-round encounter. Egan has done some sensational work in the ring during the past eight months. He was consigned a fourth-rater a year ago and was unable to get matches at local clubs. He then went to New York, where he attached himself to Jack Britton's training camp. The South Boston boy has improved wonderfully and recently punched holes in "Young" McDonough of Manchester, N. H.

Eagan is a skilful boxer, and if he can keep moving should outpoint Brooks. The latter, however, it always dangerous. He is a lightweight with the punch of a middleweight, as my friend "Kid" Block puts it.

There will be two six-round preliminaries. Billy Corrigan of Cambridge will clash with Jed Stone of Lowell, while Frankie Mack of Beachmont will try and prove that he is a better performer than Tom Smith, who hails from New York.

But he battled on though his youth had died
And his limbs were heavy and ossified,
And he cast his challenges far and wide

Oh, the bunk he springs and the junk he springs
As he travels about the land!
And all men know that he hasn't a show
Though he blows like a German band
But, being a fighter, he never will know
And he never will understand.

"WHITE HOPES" ARE READY FOR BATTLE

NEW YORK, April 28.—Luther McCarty, "white heavyweight champion," and Frank Morgan, the Pittsburgh "white hope," quit training today. They meet in a ten-round bout Wednesday night. McCarty will get a guarantee of $6,500, judged by the respective records and ability of the men Morgan will get a good beating.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Pitching ability must be second nature in the Walsh family. Martin Walsh, brother of "Big Ed," the White Sox star, pitched for a semi-professional team yesterday and allowed only one hit. When the opposition got more than four hits his teammates summon a council of war.

Exeter Crew to Meet Groton in Race on June 4

EXETER, N. H., April 28.—Exeter is to have another four-oared shell for the use of the school crews, and it is expected to arrive this week and be ready for use. The date for the race with the Groton School has been set for June 4, the Groton crew having arranged for Exeter to use one of its shells for the contest. Exeter will go down the night before the race.

The school crew is rapidly developing under the coaching of E. J. P. Burgess of the faculty for the first race, that with the Middlesex School, May 24, at Concord.

WHITE HOPES TO BATTLE.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Whitey Allen, the "Terrible Swede," and Jim Coffey, the "Dublin giant," will clash in a ten-round heavyweight bout here tomorrow night.

NEW YORK, April 28.—The Red Sox were out to make it two straight victories over the New York Yankees today. Stahl's men realize that they will have to play championship ball from now on if they are to win the American League pennant this year.

Connie Mack's athletics are playing a dashing game and if they obtain a big lead early in the season it will be a difficult task for the Red Sox to beat them out in the final dash for the wire.

The Yankees have experienced a great deal of hard luck this season, but were determined to take today's game. Frank Chance will probably use Ray Keating on the mound today. This sensational young hurler has already humbled the world's champions once this season, while he has also taken the measure of the Athletics. If he pitches this afternoon the Red Sox will have to play a rattling good game if they are to finish in front.

The Boston pitchers have not shown good form this year. The men seem unable to go the entire distance of nine innings. Ray Collins may pitch today. Collins has not done very well this year, but Stahl believes that he is now in shape to do his best work. There is also a possibility that O'Brien or Hall may pitch.

Joe Wood's thumb is still in poor condition. He, however, refuses to obey his doctor and take a much needed rest. He was hit on the injured finger in practice Friday and this has not done him any good. It is expected that it will be fully two weeks before the speed king will be in perfect condition again. Wood is anxious to get into the game and it would not be surprising if he would pitch in one of the games against the Yankees.

BLANCHARD IS PROFESSIONAL TRACK COACH

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

(Quarter-mile Champion of United States and Canada.)

To the many athletic followers throughout New England the announcement that Vaughn S. Blanchard, the former Bates College track team captain, has joined the ranks of professional athletes will be received with a great deal of surprise and particularly to the members of the Boston Athletic Association; for up to the present time none of the officials connected with that club is aware of Blanchard's status.

Blanchard is, and has been for the past three weeks, the coach of the Hartford High School track team. He is receiving a salary for this work and is therefore unable to compete again in the amateur ranks.

Was Star at Bates.

Blanchard first came into prominence while attending Bates College, Maine. He attracted attention by his fine work as a hurdler and was elected track captain in his senior year. He won many events while in college. During the Summer months he represented the Boston Athletic Association and it was while running for the Back Bay Club that the Maine athlete attracted so much attention for in the Fall of 1912 he won the junior national 110-yard hurdles, defeating a fast field. He also won a place in the senior event on the following day.

On returning to college, he started to prepare himself for the Olympic tryouts in the Harvard Stadium which were held last June. At the New England college championships he was forced to take second honors to Wendell, the Wesleyan hurdler. This did not faise the Bates captain, however, for two weeks later when the tryouts were held in the Harvard Stadium Blanchard startled the critics by winning the high hurdle race from Wendell and Eller besides many other athletes of note.

Competed in Olympics.

He was immediately picked as a sure place winner in the meet that was to take place a month later in the city of Stockholm. Unfortunately for him he was unable to place, but his work was very gratifying to the American contingent that witnessed the games. When Blanchard graduated from Bates last year he entered the Springfield Y. M. C. A. training school. Three weeks ago he signed a contract to coach the Hartford High School track team. He is one of the youngest track coaches in the East and his many friends in athletic circles wish him the best of luck in his new position.

EXETER TENNIS MEN IN TITLE TOURNEY

EXETER, N. H., April 28.—Exeter this season will send a tennis team to the Yale interscholastic tournament, May 24. It will be headed by Clinton B. Herd, the national interscholastic champion. The team will also compete in the Harvard interscholastic tournament, November 10. The date for the annual Exeter-Andover tennis match is June 11, at Exeter. The season will close with the St. Paul's School team of Concord, N. H.

Right Off the Bat

By RILEY.

NEW YORK, Philadelphia and Washington baseball writers agree unanimously that the Red Sox are not playing with nearly the dash, smoothness or finish which won the pennant for them last year. These writers are already searching elsewhere for a flag winner. Not having seen any of the Western teams in action they qualify their selections, but they seem inclined to favor Connie Mack to "come back."

* * *

HERE in Boston, where the base ball writers have been accustomed to see the Sox day after day, the critics of the game are not in such a hurry to throw up the sponge. Stahl's red-hosed champions produced some very ragged games last season, some of them quite as raw as those which have kept them down near the foot of the ladder this year. But they used to save up all of their bad baseball until they had quite a collection thereof, and then dump it all into one game. Early in the season they were unloading in this fashion about once in every three games. Later they deferred it until the fourth, and finally until the fifth game. By this stretching process they got away with the fans.

* * *

THE fact is, the Sox played on their "nerve" all last year, and there were necessary reactions at almost regular intervals, which accounted for the "off days." These breakdowns helped rather than hindered the Sox in their upward movement. They prevented the champions from falling into any long slumps. The "champs" never won any long stretches of games, nor did they have any slumps of more than one day's duration in 1912. They won the pennant by taking, first, two in every three games; then three in every four, and finally four in every five, holding just about that gait in nearly all of the series they played; except, of course, with the Yankees and Browns, upon whom they swooped from time to time for a "clean-up."

* * *

THE American League season of 1912 started a week later than that of 1913. But poor weather has robbed the teams of the benefit of the early beginning and, on the whole, they have played few more games than they had a year ago at this time. The standing on May 1, 1912, was:

	W.	L.	P.C.		W.	L.	P.C.
Chicago	11	7	.611	Athletics	7	7	.500
Boston	9	5	.643	Detroit	9	10	.375
Washington	8	6	.571	St. Louis	7	9	.350
Cleveland	9	6	.538	New York	3	10	.231

The standing today is:

	W.	L.	P.C.		W.	L.	P.C.
Athletics	11	5	.688	St. Louis	7	9	.437
Cleveland	10	4	.714	Boston	5	8	.385
Washington	8	7	.533	Detroit	5	9	.357
Chicago	8	9	.500	New York	2	10	.182

* * *

THE following monthly table of victories and defeats shows how consistently the Sox worked throughout last season, and gives an idea of the handicap they must make up to get into the race this year:

	W.	L.		W.	L.
May	22	7	August	22	6
June	23	7	Sept.	22	6
July	20	10	Oct.	2	1

They finished with 105 games won and 47 lost. Their nearest competitor, Washington, won 91 and lost 61. But experience shows that fifty defeats in a season is close to all a team can stand, as a rule, and get away with the pennant.

* * *

THE Giants won 103 and lost 48 last year. The Pirates won 93, lost 58, and finished second. Barney Dreyfuss had great hopes of reversing this order this season. But luck has been against him. With Wagner out of the game; Gibson, his star catcher, laid up, and other players laid off from time to time, Dreyfuss is having plenty of adversity—more than his share, in fact. Two years ago he had a great chance to cop the flag, but at the critical moment Wagner broke an ankle, and it was all off. This year, however, in spite of his troubles, Dreyfuss is off to a flying start. His Pirates are right up there behind the Giants.

* * *

MCGRAW has had the advantage to date in having a team free of illness and accident, and of playing all of his games against the perennially weak Pilgrims and Dodgers and weak-hitting Phillies, while Dreyfuss has had to tussle with the Cubs. But the Pirates have had some unexpected assistance in finding Cincinnati, which started last season with a marvelous sprint, in the rack this year.

* * *

IN Philadelphia the "fans" are already talking about settling the world's championship right at home in Pennsylvania—between the Athletics and the Pirates. But in Philadelphia they have little to talk about except that and the weather.

BALTIMORE LIFTS BASEBALL LID, BUT RAIN HALTS GAME

BALTIMORE, April 28.—For the first time in many years an effort to play a championship baseball game in this vicinity on Sunday was made yesterday. It was frustrated only by a heavy downpour of rain, which put a stop to play between the Baltimore and Buffalo clubs of the International League at the end of the second inning, with the score 3 to 2.

Formerly county police did not interfere with these games as long as no admission fee was charged, but the baseball people saw that every one who got in purchased a fan or something to eat for what the regular price of admission was charged.

Today, however, regular tickets with rain checks were sold and the police did not interfere. A large crowd was present.

WELSH IN BOUT TONIGHT.

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., April 28.—Freddie Welsh, lightweight champion of England, will meet Al Ketchel, the local pride, in a ten-round bout tonight. Ketchel recently disposed of "Young Jack" O'Brien of Philadelphia.

Cassidy Gives Praise to Friends of Bills for Pure Food on Beacon Hill

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

I want to give my congratulations today to half a dozen Representatives on Beacon Hill who, Friday, united in denouncing the scurrilous attack upon a pure food bill and upon myself, made by Representative Charles L. Underhill of Somerville.

A bill was being debated which forbids the sale of rotten fruit, vegetables, meat or other food. This bill had been reported as a result of two measures referred to the committee on Public Health—one introduced by Inspector Joseph L. Johnson of Cambridge, and the other by myself. After the debate, the bill was passed, 60 to 27, and Representative Underwood is expected to move reconsideration today.

Representative Underhill comes from Somerville. Somerville is the home of some of the big packing houses. It is also the home of Walter Glidden, former member of the Executive Council, a Republican of great influence, and a man with large interests in the packing business.

Representative Underhill opposed the bill. Remember that it simply forbids the sale of rotten stuffs. Now read what he had to say:

"The Legislature," he said, "has gone far enough in legislating the fantastic efforts of a single individual to further increase the price of food products—for that is all that legislation of this sort accomplishes.

"It is time that we discontinued encouraging the public to believe in the crazy ideas of a man imported into this State from another State, which he left under a cloud."

He used abusive language in referring to the AMERICA'S right for pure food.

Underhill Criticised.

Representative John P. Brennan of Cambridge, floor leader of the Cambridge delegation in the House, and John F. Meaney of Charlestown, the minority leader of the House, attacked Underhill for bringing personalities into the debate, declaring that it was a cheap attempt to take the attention of the House away from the merits of the bill.

Brennan said that the bill was fathered by Inspector Johnson of Cambridge, and was taken up by the AMERICAN after the Cambridge official had presented it.

"The AMERICAN deserves all praise," he said, "for the public spirit which it has shown in these matters. The gentleman from Somerville should be ashamed of indulging in attacks upon the character of a gentleman of whom he knows little or nothing, attacks engendered upon fact, but merely upon rumors circulated by those against whom he is waging an honest fight in the interests of the public health."

Representative Meaney said that Underhill should be relied upon to act justly in all cases brought before them for violations of the law. He ridiculed the argument made by Underhill that a dealer would be fined or imprisoned if in a barrel of potatoes a single potato containing dry rot was found.

Representatives Thomas J. Giblin of East Boston, P. Joseph McManus of Boston, Bradstreet of Danvers and Sharp of Nantucket, defended the bill. McManus, who was in charge of the favorable report of the Committee on Public Health on the bill, made an eloquent plea for it.

Favor Pure Food.

Representative McManus is identifying himself as one of the foremost in the fight for pure food. Representative Meaney, the most outstanding speaker in the House, has consistently supported food bills, and Representative Brennan has been found fighting on the right side in every debate. Representative Giblin of East Boston is an earnest worker for food purity, while Representative Bradstreet and Representative Sharp, members of the Committee on Public Health, have debated in favor of most of the food bills that have been presented to the House.

The Social Calendar

The initial performance of "The Magic Rose," a poetic fairy play, will be given tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Plymouth Theatre. The play is by Susan Thayer Bowker. The list of patronesses includes Mrs. Eugene N. Foss, Mrs. Noble Foss, Mrs. Thomas Allen, Mrs. William Lowell Putnam, Mrs. Gordon Abbot, Mrs. William Tudor, Mrs. Samuel Mister, Mrs. Robert G. Emery, and many other Boston women of social prominence. The play is being given under the supervision of Miss Clara Bartoux, manager of the Clara Bartoux Plays for Children Company.

The Chamber of Commerce luncheon to be held tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. at the AMERICAN House is expected to be a feast of oratory as well as of viands. The speakers will include Joseph C. Emery, former head of the National Tariff Board.

Tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock, in the Park Street Church, the American Society of Colonial Families, of which Dean Hodges of the Episcopal Theological is an important session, followed by a banquet. There will be a "forum table talk" by Mrs. Annie M. Smith, Mrs. E. H. Crosby, Professor George H. Barton, Gardner Bates and Charles E. Lawrence.

Sir William Osler, professor of medicine at Oxford University, who was once reported as jestingly advocating the etherization of men over forty years of age, delivers a public address on the same lecture hall at Harvard tomorrow evening.

The young people of Jamaica Plain are interested in tomorrow evening's minstrel show to be given at Jordan Hall. Many well known participants in amateur dramatics will take part. Among the soloists will be the Misses Mae Hogan, Margaret Barry, Natalie Bates and Helen Swan.

The dedication of the Elizabeth Peabody House, at No. 357 Charles street, takes place tomorrow evening.

The annual dinner of the Suffolk Law School will be held tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock at the Quincy House.

Professor W. D. Frost of the University of Wisconsin lectures under the auspices of the Women's Municipal League at No. 6 Marlboro street, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Best Books Offer to Be Made Again

The distribution of Everybody's Cyclopedia last week was such an overwhelming success that the AMERICAN will offer its readers another chance this week.

No such offer was ever heard of before and readers are enthusiastic in their praise of the plan, as well as the beautiful five-volume set offered.

Everybody's Cyclopedia contains a wealth of useful information never before appearing in a work of this character. It treats of 35,000 subjects in all branches of knowledge; its biographical sketches include celebrities of the earliest times down to those of today; it contains a chronological history of the world from the beginning of all history to the present. Its educational charts record the progress of the world; it treats of the arts and sciences, inventions and discoveries, literature, architecture, electricity and agriculture; it is profusely illustrated with magnificent color plates, monotone engravings and text pictures. It stands alone as the best reference work for busy people—a set of books that should be in every home, school and office.

This useful five-volume set regularly sells for $12, but this week you get the complete set for $1.98 and the Cyclopedia coupon appearing daily on another page. The sets are too bulky to be sent by mail, but out-of-town readers can have them for the $1.98, the set to be sent by express, shipping charges to be paid by the receiver.

Read the display announcement in this issue and clip the Cyclopedia coupon without further delay.

PART I.

THE owner of the store returned to his labors with a new zest, for the meeting with his son had put him in high spirits. Perhaps it might have been better for Mary Turner had she come to him just then, while he was yet in this softened mood. But fate had ordained that other events should restore him to his usual harder self before their interview. The effect was, indeed, presently accomplished by the advent of Smithson into the office. He entered with an expression of discomfiture on his rather vacuous countenance. He walked almost nimbly to the desk and spoke with evident distress, as his employer looked up interrogatively.

"Mr. Gilder has detained—er—a lady, sir," he said, feebly. "She has been searched, and we have found about a hundred dollars worth of laces on her." He added the last item apologetically. Such affairs were too common in the store to make necessary this intrusion of the master on his subordinate, and Smithson knew it, but this slight knew just what to do with shoplifters.

At once Smithson became apologetic, while refusing to retreat.

"I'm very sorry, sir," he said haltingly, "but I thought it wiser, sir, to—er—to bring the matter to your personal attention."

"Quite unnecessary, Smithson," Gilder returned, with asperity. "You know my views on the subject of property. Tell McCracken to have the thief arrested."

Smithson cleared his throat doubtfully, and in his stress of feeling in even he relaxed a trifle that majestical exactness of carriage that had made him so valuable as a floorwalker.

"She's not exactly a—er—a—thief," he ventured.

"You are trifling, Smithson," the owner of the store exclaimed, in high exasperation. "Not a thief! And you sought her with a hundred dollars worth of laces that she hadn't bought. Not a thief! What in heaven's name do you call her, then?"

"A kleptomaniac," Smithson explained, resuming his manner of wild insistence. "You see, sir, it's this way. The lady happens to be the wife of J. W. Gaskell, the banker, you know."

Like a Spell

Yes, Gilder did know. The mention of the name was like a spell in the effect it wrought on the attitude of the irritated owner of the store. Instantly his expression changed. While before his features had been set grimly, while his eyes had flashed wrathfully, there was now only annoyance over an event markedly unfortunate.

"How extremely awkward," he cried; and there was a very real concern in his voice. He regarded Smithson vindictively, whereat that rather puling gentleman once again assumed his martial bearing. "You were quite right in coming to me. For a moment he was silent, plunged in thought. Finally he spoke with the decisiveness characteristic of him. "Of course, there's nothing we can do. Just put the stuff back on the counter and let her go."

But Smithson had not yet wholly unburdened himself. Instead of himself obeying the room in pursuance of the succinct instructions given him, he again cleared his throat nervously and made known a further aggravating factor in the situation.

"She's very sorry, Mr. Gilder," he announced, timidly. "She—er—she demands an—er—an apology."

The owner of the store half-rose from his chair, then threw himself back with an exclamation of disgust. He again elucidated the words with which he had greeted his son's unexpected kisses, but now there was a vast difference in the intonation.

"Can't Be Helped"

"God bless my soul!" he cried. From his expression, it was clear that a plous persuasion was farthest from his thought.

"In the nursery! Again, he fell silent, considering the situation which Smithson had presented, and, as he reflected, his brow betrayed the emotion natural enough under the circumstances. At last, however, he mastered his irritation in some degree, and spoke his command briefly. "Well Smithson, apologize to her. It can't be helped." Then his face lighted with a sardonic amusement. "And, Smithson," he went on with a sort of elephantine playfulness, "I shall take it as a personal favor if you will tactfully advise the lady that the goods at Altman's and Stern's are really even finer than ours."

When Smithson had left the office, Gilder turned to his secretary.

"Take this," he directed, and he forthwith directed the following letter to the husband of the lady who was not a thief, as Smithson had so painstakingly pointed out:

J. W. Gaskell, Esq., Central National Bank, New York.

My Dear Mr. Gaskell—I feel that I should be doing less than my duty as a man if I did not let you know at once that Mrs. Gaskell is in urgent need of medical attention. She came into our store today, and—

He paused for a moment. "No, put it this way," he said, finally:

We found her wandering about our store today in a very nervous condition. In her excitement, she carried away about one hundred dollars' worth of rare laces. Not recognizing her, our store detective detained her for a short time. Fortunately for us all, Mrs. Gaskell was able to explain who she was, and she has just gone to her home. Hoping for Mrs. Gaskell's speedy recovery, and with all good wishes, I am,

Your very truly,

Yet, though he had completed the letter, Gilder did not at once take up another detail of his business. Instead, he remained plunged in thought, and now his frown was one of simple bewilderment. A number of minutes passed before he spoke, and then his words revealed distinctly what had been his train of meditation.

"Sadie," he said in a voice of entire sincerity, "I can't understand theft. It's a thing absolutely beyond my comprehension."

Not Satisfied

On the heels of this ingenuous declaration, Smithson entered the office, and that excellent gentleman appeared even more perturbed than before.

"What on earth is the matter now?" Gilder spluttered, suspiciously.

"It's Mrs. Gaskell still," Smithson replied in great trepidation. "She wants you personally, Mr. Gilder, to apologize to her. She says that the action taken against her is an outrage, and she is not satisfied with the apologies of all the rest of us. She says you must make one, too, and that the store detective must be discharged for intolerable insolence."

Gilder bounced up from his chair angrily.

"I'll be damned if I'll discharge McCracken," he vociferated, glaring at Smithson, who shrank visibly.

But that mild and meek man had a certain strength of pertinacity. Behind in this case, he had been having misfortunes enough of his own, which could be ended only by his employer's placating of the offended kleptomaniac.

"But about the apology, Mr. Gilder," he reminded, speaking very deferentially, yet with insistence.

Business instinct triumphed over the magnate's irritation, and his face cleared. "Oh, I'll apologize," he said with a wry smile of discomfiture. "I'll make things even up a bit when I get an apology from Gaskell. I already suspect that that estimable gentleman is going to eat humble pie, of my own baking, from his wife's recital. And his will be an honest apology—which mine won't, not by a damned sight!" With the words he left the room, in his wake a hugely relieved Smithson.

Alone in the office, Sarah neglected her work for a few moments to brood over the startling contrast of events that had just forced itself on her attention. She was not a girl given to the analysis of either persons or things, but in this instance the movement of affairs had come close to her, and she was compelled to some depth of feeling by the two aspects of life on which fortune had so prodigally showered ordinarily only insignificant. "Tell me now," she murmured, with a monotonous emphasis that somehow moved Sarah to obedience against her will, greatly to her own surprise.

"What sent her to prison for three years?" she answered, sharply.

"Three years?" The salesgirl had repeated the words in a tone that was indefinable, yet a tone coherent in its incredulous questioning. "Three years?" she said again, as one refusing to believe.

"Yes," Sarah said, impressed by the girl's earnestness; "three years."

"Good God!" There was no irreverence in the exclamation that broke from the girl's lips. Instead, only a tense horror that touched to the roots of emotion.

Sarah regarded this display of feeling on the part of the young woman before her with an increasing astonishment. It was not in her own nature to be demonstrative, and such strong expression of emotion as this she seemed rather suspicious. She recalled, in addition, the fact that this was not the first time that Helen Morris had shown a particular interest in the fate of Mary Turner. Sarah wondered why.

"Sir," she demanded, with the directness habitual to her, "why are you so anxious about it? This is the third time you have asked me about Mary Turner. What's it to you, I'd like to know?"

"What is it to me?" she repeated in an effort to gain time. "Why, nothing—nothing at all!" Her expression of distress lightened a little as she hit on an excuse that might serve to justify her interest. "Nothing at all, only—she's a friend of mine, a great friend of mine. Oh, yes!" Then, in an instant, the look of relief vanished, as once again the terrible reality hammered on her conscious-ness, and an overwhelming dejection showed in the dull eyes and in the drooping curves of the white lips. There was a monotone of desolation as she went on speaking in a whisper meant for the ears of no other. "It's awful—three years! Oh, I didn't understand! It's awful—awful!" With the final word, she hurried off, her head bowed. She was still murmuring brokenly, incoherently. Her whole attitude was of wondering grief.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

WHEN it comes to love affairs, the modern girl's heart is an incubator, compared with which the old-fashioned girl's heart was a hen.

Which means that the capacity of the modern girl's heart is unlimited.

Daysey Mayme Appleton has always made it a point to use the scraps of her funeral-baked meats for an appetiser for the succeeding love feast. With one swipe of her powder puff she wipes out the traces of tears shed for a departing love, and touches up her nose to attract a new.

No widower returning from a brand new grave in the cemetery ever wasted less time.

Such energetic measures are not without their results, and before her family had recovered from her last broken engagement, she was engaged anew. Her lover, who lived in a distant town, had proposed by letter.

It would take time to reply. It would be at least eighteen hours before he could get her answer.

"He might in that long time," mused Daysey Mayme, "change his mind."

Such a risk was too great to contemplate. She would telegraph.

Ten minutes later, she was in the nearest telegraph office, facing a youth who looked as important as if he were the United States government.

"How many words," she asked him, "can I send for twenty-five cents?"

He told her ten, and she retired to a table to compose her answer.

"Yes, I am proud to say it. Come at once."

Just ten! She was delighted with her reply, till a sudden harrowing thought struck her. That word "Yes," was so little and unobtrusive. Suppose it should get lost off? She would write another message and put it in the middle.

"You have made me very happy. Yes, come to me."

But the word "Yes" looked smaller and less secure than ever, and telegraph companies are so careless. She tried it at the end of the message and realised that its peril was still greater.

Daysey Mayme is a resourceful girl. After chewing her pencil and writing message after message, she sent one that could leave no doubt.

The operator had said ten words.

She counted them carefully, and here is the message she sent:

"Yes, Yes, Yes, Yes, Yes. Yes. Yes, Yes, Yes, Yes."

"If the telegraph company loses half of them, she said to herself with a sigh of satisfaction when on her way home, there will still be enough left."

ANSWER WANTED

A LEARNED professor at one of the large public schools was explaining to his class how the identity of a thing might remain, even with the loss of its parts. "Here," he said, "is this penknife. Now, suppose I lose this blade and replace it with a new one—you see it has two blades—is it still the same knife?"

"Yes, yes!" cried the class.

"And suppose," he said, "I lose the second blade and replace it with a new one—is it still the same knife?"

"Oh, yes," said the class.

"Now," said the professor, triumphantly, "suppose I lose the handle and have a new one made—is it still the same knife?"

"Certainly!" roared the class.

But here a youth of more than the clear-headed kind. "Professor," said he, "suppose I should find those two blades and that handle and put them together again—what knife would that be?"

The professor's answer is not recorded.

"If you think about yourself you will be self-conscious."

By LILIAN LAUFERTY

"IS she as pretty off the stage as on?"—haven't you often wondered that about your favorite star, or even some of the lesser lights who dazzle your eyes with their loveliness?

I know one stage beauty who is far lovelier in her little dressing room than all the glare and tinsel of stage illusion can make her. Ethel Barrymore's wonderfully expressive gray eyes, flower-like white throat and gracious manner are little private lovelinesses so fine and rare that you must miss them except at close range. And she is modest. THAT MODESTY ADDS A CHARM TO HER BEAUTY SUCH AS LITTLE MISS SELF-SATISFACTION WOULD DO WELL TO STUDY.

"You want me to talk about beauty," said Miss Barrymore. "Beauty means Maxine Elliott to me. Maxine Elliott, with her wonderful face and figure, and the splendid brain that animates it all. Brains, brains!—they are the inspiration and real spirit of true beauty.

"It is stupid not to know how to bring out your points or to let your prettiness fade.

Cold Water for Youth

"A frilly black ruff back of a long white throat and a sparkling face animated by brains will bring out the charm of the foreground. If you are wishing to look your prettiest, and look tired and drawn instead, plenty of cold water will bring the becoming flush of color to your face.

"You know there is nothing immoral about beauty, though some old fogies seem to think so. Think of making laws about the width of women's skirts, and whether two inches or two and a quarter inches of white throat should be shown by the low-cut blouse!

"Good cold cream will do a lot toward assuring you of a white throat. Good taste will tell you where to cut your blouse. Women ought to study these things, as men won't need to come out of their sphere and agitate about them. I told one fat old hypocritical mayor out West, who when forced to have a vice crusade in his wicked town began by making laws about the width of women's skirts, that what worried him was not having those inches skirts wide enough to hide behind any more."

The star laughed merrily.

"You interest yourself in divers causes?" the interviewer was laughing too.

Don't Be Self-Conscious

"Oh, yes. Women suffer. Interest yourself in things outside yourself, FOR IF YOU THINK ABOUT YOURSELF YOU WILL BE SELF-CONSCIOUS, AND THAT MEANS AWKWARD AND UNBEAUTIFUL.

"Now, I am shy." Think of that, you little blushing girls whose self-consciousness worries you to the point of tears. Beautiful, talented Ethel Barrymore is "shy." And her cure for self-consciousness is to be interested in things outside your own petty little self.

"On the stage I AM my part. I lose myself. In society I am one of the guests, and I forget Ethel Barrymore. But if I am asked at a dinner to get up and recite; or if in a public place people stare and force self-consciousness, I am not happy. ONE NEVER IS HAPPY IF THINKING OF SELF. Posing and selling unconcerned won't help it; brains and hard work will.

"This brings me to the beauty of a happy home life. Now, I have my husband, my two children, my tasks and duties. The glaring restaurant life does not bring out contentment, self-forgetfulness—or a consequent sweet expression.

"For beauty—brains, modesty, self-forgetfulness, happy home life and good taste!" I mused.

"Brains cover it all. You have to be wise enough to bring out your good points, and to cover your poor ones until you can overcome them. You must have brains, and study to develop them, if you want to be more than a pretty picture that people glance at and forget."

"Haven't you some personal beauty secrets?" I asked boldly.

"I? Beauty secrets?" in a tone of honest amusement.

"Yes, you indeed."

"Oh, no. I study a lot, of course. I read twenty-five books up to Toronto last week. I am always reading—and studying music. And I guard my health." Miss Barrymore laughed and took an earnest nibble at the lemon she is relying on to help her overcome a threatened case of laryngitis. "A simple life? Not too much rich food—high thinking. I've just one pet theory—two glasses of cold water morning and evening. That is such a gentle stimulus to the physical well-being."

Over on the mantle shelf, next to the picture of two dear little kiddies, stood a bottle of mineral water.

"Has that a special medicinal value?" I asked.

"No. I just try to be sure of clear, pure water. I am not sure in the average theatre—so I drink bottled water. But I never omit my before-going-to-bed drink of water.

"I drink milk, too. Though it is not safe to take much of that if you are threatened with an accumulation of pounds. You see, brains come in again about not growing fat in these days of cults. DON'T LET FAT ACCUMULATE. For in the process of losing it violently, you are likely to get a drawn and haggard look. That means you are going to appear old. Soft facial contours guard against the appearance of age."

I looked approvingly at Miss Barrymore's smooth, facial contour and wonderful skin. She smiled shyly.

"If you know you are thin and emaciated—or if you overhear a fat creature of about 200 pounds net weight, remarking: 'There's Ethel Barrymore at the next table, John. How stout she's grown—dear me, she is stouter than I am!'—why, then, in either case you are likely to become self-conscious.

"So, you see, I have to avoid an emaciated face and over-weighted body as the modern Scylla and Charybdis—and so should all girls.

"You see, it is all a perfect circle. Your 'restful brain' must guard you against the necessity of self-consciousness—and I think that is the best beauty secret I know."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

NOT FAIR TO YOU.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young woman about six months. A short time back she went away and met a young man and became engaged to him. Since her return she has been writing asking me to keep her company just the same, as the man she is engaged to is far away, and she will not see him for maybe six months. Do you think it right for me to go with her?

J. W.

MOST decidedly not. She is not true in thought to her fiance in asking it and is not fair to you.

NOT IF YOU LOVE HIM

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl of nineteen, and am deeply in love with a gentleman twenty years my senior. This gentleman calls upon me every evening, and is always very affectionate.

I am engaged to this gentleman, and expect to marry him some time next month. Do you think the difference in age is too great?

DOLLY.

THE difference is on the right side. If you were twenty years his senior I would urge you not to marry him, but the years are so much harder on woman than on a man that this difference between your age and his will grow less every year.

NEITHER IS THE ONE FOR YOU

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty and deeply in love with a man five years my senior, who is employed as a junior clerk in the same bank where I am employed as a stenographer, who does not reciprocate any of the attentions I pay him, although both my mother and I have asked him to call on a number of occasions. I am also acquainted with a very gentlemanly chauffeur, and, although I have a great liking for him, still there is not the same feeling of love that I have for my bank clerk, but he is genuinely and sincerely devoted to me.

I don't know whether to accept the attentions of the chauffeur and in time learn to love and cherish him, or to continue trying to win over the embryo banker. The bank clerk at present makes only $12 a week, where the chauffeur in salary and tips earns at least five times that much and would be able to support me in better style.

AGNES H.

ONE doesn't care for you; you don't love the other. Doesn't that prove that neither is the man for you?

I am sorry you paid such marked attention to the first man. Don't do it again. A man likes to take the initiative in courting, and when a girl takes it it frightens him away.

YOU DID RIGHT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young lady for the past four months. About seven girls in the neighborhood have formed a club, to which this young lady belongs. I know two of the girls of that club to be not altogether reputable characters. I told this girl of these two, and advised her to give up this club until these two mentioned girls either quit, or were told to do so. She immediately told me to mind my own business, so I have not spoken of it since.

Did I do right in this case?

FAITHFUL.

YOU were right to warn her, and if you are a man of your premises and she continues to disregard your warning, tell her brother or mother what you have learned.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"I SEE that President Wilson went to the opening game at Washington between the Yankees and the Washington team," said the Head Barber.

"I suppose he thinks that he ought to imitate Taft that much, after showing him up so last election. The papers had a whole lot about him, how he pulled his brown Fedora down over his eyes and watched the game like a hawk from beginning to end. I suppose he was picking out the ball players that makes over $5,000 a year, so he could put the bee on them for that income tax of his."

"It must be just grand to be a President, and go out to the ball game in a auto and sit in a box where everybody can get a slant at you," said the Manicure Lady. "Goodness knows, George, if you and me was to go to a ball game they wouldn't notice what I was wearing and they wouldn't know whether you had on a brown Fedora or a hold over.

Speaking About Ball Games

"But speaking about ball games and other forms of amusement," continued the Manicure Lady, "me and sister Maymie and Wilfred were all over to New York and went to see the circus that used to be gave by Mister Barnum and Mister Bailey. They aint with the show any more, because it is long after their time, but it is ran simply grand, George.

"A friend of Wilfred's gave us some swell seats and there we sat, thinking about the days when we were little kids when there was only one ring inside the big tent and two clowns instead of twenty.

"They had some wonderful features, though, even if it wasn't the same as in the old days.

"Honest to goodness, I never knew there was so many freaks in the world, outside of the ones that blows in here sometimes to have their nails did. Wilfred was saying that he didn't care, after looking at them, whether he had a job or not. He said that it was enough to make a man thankful to know that he had his health and a fine personality.

His Fine Personality

"Poor boy! has always thought that he had a fine personality ever since one of them palmists told him that he was cut out to be a traveling man for a big concern."

"How was Wilfred's conduct" asked the Head Barber. "You know you were telling me that he was sitting it up pretty hard after getting his last bunch of poems back from the magazine editor."

"He wasn't exactly right," admitted the Manicure Lady. "When Mr. Fellows came up and sat in out for to visit for a little while, me and sister Maymie was kind of hoping he would stay, because he seemed like a nice kind of a gent. I know he would have stayed, only Wilfred began spouting some poetry that he was making up as he went along.

"The poor boy can't write nothing good if it takes him all night, so you can imagine the kind of junk he would make up as he went along. This is about how the stuff sounded that he was handing out to Mr. Fellows:

"The circuses of ancient Rome
Were not so grand as this;
I'm glad I came all the way from home
To enjoy that night of bliss.
My breast with gratitude does swell
Just like a blacksmith's bellows,
I thank you more than I can tell
For this here show, Mr. Fellows."

"I suppose Fellows left the box after that," said the Head Barber.

Must Take the Pledge

"He had a right to, and he had a right to ask us to leave, too, because I guess he must have seen by that time that dearest brother was feeling his oats and you can bet, George, that I ain't never going to a circus or anything else with Wilfred until he takes the pledge. Why, he even jumped into the ring in the middle of the show and tried to throw one of them Iceland wrestlers. He got thrown out on his ear, first by the wrestler and then by the usher, and met me and Maymie outside after the show."

"It's too bad you didn't have your father along," suggested the Head Barber.

"Not by no means," said the Manicure Lady. "That would only have added to the horrors of the occasion."

STOCK MARKET AND FINANCIAL NEWS

Stock markets opened under conditions that depressed them last week and with news from the Balkans a little more disturbing. There was no investment demand apparent and traders were as bearish as ever. Early losses in the local market, which opened weaker, were not large, however.

Prices sagged in New York at the start and weakness of Canadian Pacific was pronounced. At the end of an hour it was down 2½.

Why Copper Shares Fell.

The London copper warrants market was easy at the opening, spot being off 7s. 6d. and futures 2s. 6d.

The Boston News Bureau says: "The weakness in Boston copper shares has been due to rumblings of labor troubles at Lake Superior. For five months the American Federation of Labor has had a walking delegate at work in the district, and an issue is expected about May 1.

"A good many miners have been leaving the district and going to other fields, so that labor is very scarce and the labor leaders feel that this is the time to strike capital, notwithstanding the increase that has been made in wages at Lake Superior the past year.

"We understand that orders have been going from Boston mining companies to Lake Superior to make preparations for shutdowns and that some of the mines will make answer to the demands with an immediate closing and without any parley."

Prices Open Lower in New York.

When the New York market opened there was more pressure upon international issues, especially Canadian Pacific, than had been known at any time within a week. The rallying power which was observed late at the Saturday session had vanished. Canadian Pacific, Lehigh Valley, American Smelting, Amalgamated and Reading were weak, and a number of stocks sold at new low levels for the year. Losses ranged from fractions to about two points.

Early trading was very active. The recessional movement was attributed in a measure to the war scare in Europe. London was disturbed by news from Albania, which indicated more difficulty in the settlement of the Balkan situation. American stocks were above New York parity in London, but sentiment toward them was uncertain. The decline in Canadian Pacific was due to Berlin.

Some of the Early Losses.

Early losses in New York included Amalgamated 1¼, American Smelting 1, Canadian Pacific 1⅞, St. Paul 1, Erie ⅝, Illinois Central ⅝, Lehigh Valley 1⅝, Missouri Pacific ⅝, Steel common ⅝, Utah Copper ⅝, Union Pacific ⅝, Southern Pacific ⅝, Reading ⅛ and Pennsylvania ⅛.

After half an hour's trading a stronger tone developed and some stocks made partial recoveries. New York Central advanced ⅜, while Northern Pacific gained ½. Missouri Pacific recovered and gained.

The Curb was easy.

Quick Work on Tariff Bill.

Democratic leaders in the House expect to pass the tariff bill over to the Senate in about ten days. The House will begin considering the measure under the five-minute rule tomorrow. Chairman Underwood has the votes to put the bill through rapidly. Some Democrats are opposed to the measure, however, and a Washington dispatch says a number have told Mr. Underwood that it will not reduce the cost of living and will prove unpopular with the people, who expect much good from it. "They argue," it is said, "that the cuts made in the tariff will be absorbed by the manufacturer, stricken off in wages and salaries, or deducted from investment incomes which the income tax bill seeks to reach.

"Illustrating this, Democratic Congressmen urge that placing of leather on the free list may result in the reduction of the cost of boots and shoes, only 2 or 3 cents a pair, and that lowering of the duty on sugar by 25 per cent will save the consumer 1 mill a day, or less than 40 cents a year.

"Wheat is reduced from 25 cents to 10 cents a bushel. Mr. Underwood does not hold out the promise that flour is to be cheaper to the consumer, though the bill opens to the American market the free use of Canadian mills and makes free all Canadian dairy products.

"The cut on cotton collars and underwear is more than 50 per cent. The great mills at Troy and other points in New York say they will be driven out of business."

Plenty of Gold in Berlin.

The great improvement in monetary situation in Germany since April settlements was reflected in the Reichbank's announcement that for the first time in its history its gold holdings had reached a total of one billion marks ($250,000,000).

Disappointment followed the failure of the Bank of England to make a second reduction in its official discount rate last week. But Berliners expect the London directors to take such action this week, whereupon the Reichsbank will probably soon follow, although its position is not improving as rapidly as it did in 1912.

Why Northwestern Is Weak.

Chicago & North-western, one of the standard roads, is selling out a few points above the low touched in 1907 panic times. The recent decline is attributed to a lack of investment demand and the nature of the railroad situation. Thompson, Towle & Company say:

"Northwestern at the close of the first nine months of its current year had earned a surplus after charges of $11,671,000 to cover total dividend requirements for the entire year, at the rate of 8 per cent on the preferred and 7 per cent on the common, of $10,889,000. In other words, if the closing quarter of this year resulted in absolutely no net corporate income, the road will have earned dividend requirements with more than $1,000,000 to spare.

"The following table explains the weakness in Northwestern, even though it is earning existing dividend rates with fair surpluses to spare:

	1912.	1911.
Total stocks and bonds	$382,754,000	$294,180,000
Total earnings	52,560,000	47,974,000
Net earnings, income	12,500,000	10,000,000
Dividend increases in dividend and interest-bearing capitalization and similar declines in net earning power have prevailed in many railroads.

Financial News in Brief.

Attorney General McReynolds says the Department of Justice cannot reopen the dissolution suit against the Tobacco Trust. When the Supreme Court ratified the dissolution proceedings of the lower Federal Court the case was closed.

The increase in wages which arbitrators have awarded locomotive firemen on fifty-four Eastern roads will amount, it is stated to $3,500,000 a year.

The Moline Plow Company has bought the property of the Chattanooga Plow Company for $600,000.

The New York sub-treasury gained $1,123,000 from banks on Saturday, making a cash net gain since Friday of $958,000.

FORBES URGES VIGILANCE BY STOCKHOLDERS

By B. D. FORBES,
Business Editor of the American.

Keener vigilance by the public not only of liberty, but of progress, prosperity and even bare solvency.

Security holders of modest means—the great army of America's four million bond and stock holders—are not vigilant enough. They leave things over much to the will of directors and officers, waking up only after something serious has happened to injure or wipe out savings. The original Havemeyer sold to buy it was none of no stockholder's business what a company was doing as long as the stockholder received his dividends regularly. We all know WHY IT WAS Havemeyer took that attitude: There were things going on in the Sugar Trust that its head did not want pried into.

But are American stockholders beginning to realize that vigilance on their part is necessary to the proper administration of corporation affairs? There are encouraging signs that they are.

Do you notice that the Steel corporation had quite an interesting and illuminating annual meeting the other day? It was more like the annual meeting of a British company that an American one. The holders of South African mining shares recently compelled the directors to hold not only the annual meetings in Johannesburg, but annual meetings in London also, where stockholders could attend and put the directors through their paces. The Johannesburg meetings—I have attended hundreds of them—are of the cut-and-dried American pattern.

Minority stockholders have been manifesting lively interest in the running of numbers of corporations lately. They are not satisfied with certain acts of the management, and they have asserted themselves vigorously instead of remaining dumbies and subsistvive. Bodies of stockholders in such companies as Central Leather, Federal Mining & Smelting, Vulcan Detinning, New York & Harlem Railway, Rutland Railroad, and Goldfield Consolidated, have been showing active interest in the doings of the directors and in more than one instance tangible results have been obtained.

The days when the president or one or two directors of a big corporation could run it as a private, personal affair are over. If the public are asked to supply capital for an enterprise, then that same public are surely entitled to be informed as to how their capital is being used. Secrecy begets acts of darkness; publicity breeds honesty.

I have received a letter from President F. D. Underwood of the Erie Railroad which will not be misapplied if reproduced here, for it bears upon the need for vigilance upon the part of security holders—although the vigilance he urges relates to the activities not of the directors, but of the multiplicity of governmental authorities who now have virtually usurped the powers of the men responsible for conducting the roads. Mr. Underwood writes:

If some one can do something to awaken the shareholders of the railroads the situation will be much improved. Surrounded, as railroads are, by spineless governors and designing legislators, the shareholders are having cold comfort, but they do not seem to realize they have a remedy.

As for the bondholders: They are in a class by themselves. You will get nothing from a bondholder until his interest stops. While many railroads in this country will pass and others reduce their dividends, the situation is not yet serious enough to involve the bondholders, so that it is upon the stockholders, in many instances widows and children, that cannot be marshaled, that the hardship will fall. The work of the despoilation will continue until the facilities become impaired, when the public will take a hand in it, and we shall then, perhaps, have a remedy.

Another Chapter on Brandeis

Some persons and newspapers have criticised me for declaring my belief that Mr. Brandeis's attack on the New Haven road is not ingenuous or based upon any public spirit. To these critics I reply that in many of Mr. Brandeis's public appearances some unpretentious client has been used to mask the real party in interest.

In the Ballinger case he purported to represent a humble citizen, one Glavis. The fact is, he was paid by Collier's Weekly for this work $30,000 as a fee with $20,000 additional for expenses.

Are we not justified in suspecting in the present case that his appearance as a private citizen is a humbug?

How much credit is to be given to the evidences that Mr. Brandeis brings out, depends upon whether he is seeking to elicit the truth, or to distort or suppress it. And this may depend on whose retainer Mr. Brandeis is holding.

He has not always represented the poor and the undefended.

When he was counsel for the United Shoe Machinery Company he declared, publicly and privately, that its business was legal, and its methods not only legal but moral. When he was retained by the so-called "Shoe Manufacturers' Alliance," an avowed enemy of the United Shoe Machinery Company, he denounced that company as an unlawful monopoly and its practices as illegal restraints of trade.

Those who care to study Mr. Brandeis's career will find other startling instances of the extent to which his attitude is influenced by a retainer.

I shall still continue to inquire:

"Who is the Corbin in this Case?"

Perhaps my one grave error is that I did not retain Mr. Brandeis first.

I should recommend a long suffering public to await the submission of all the evidence before giving adherence to Mr. Brandeis's view.

CALL JURORS FOR WELLS POISONING TRIALS NEXT WEEK

MONTPELIER, April 28.—Mrs. Anna May Wells and her husband, accused of the slaying of their two young children by arsenic, will probably be tried separately, when they face the court next week.

At a conference between the county prosecutor and the attorneys for the defence, the belief was expressed that the cases would occupy about a week. A new jury venire will be called.

Mrs. Wells was first arrested accused of sprinkling arsenic on the children's bread. The husband remained at liberty until it was charged he smuggled arsenic into the jail to his wife. The government claimed he urged her to take enough to make herself sick and to say it came in food sent in by a neighbor. Mr. Wells was then locked up accused of administering arsenic to his children.

PRINTERS MAKE NOMINATIONS FOR ELECTION MAY 28

Boston Typographical Union has nominated officers and delegates to be voted for at the annual election May 28. Treasurer Frank M. Flanagan and Assistant Secretary John O. Battis are unopposed.

William C. Trump was the only nominee for the board of trustees.

Nominees are President John J. O'Leary, John A. Kopp, Sylvester J. McBride and Henry Sterling for president; Vice-President Thomas F. Kane, John M. T. Ahern, John Mitchell, Charles S. Whiting, James H. Brehant and Daniel A. Buckley for vice-president; Secretary Joseph J. Dallas and Weldon L. Crossman for secretary, and Henry L. Abbott and George H. Russell for sergeant-at-Arms.

President Wilson, These Ought to Be the UNITED States

The States and the President They Elect Should be UNITED, Not Oppose Each Other to Oblige Some Foreign State

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

If this country SHOULD get into a war with Japan, would not President Wilson feel part of the responsibility resting upon him?

The people of Japan are intelligent and they are not going to fight this country while the country is UNITED.

But if they get, as they must get, from President Wilson the idea that the country is NOT united, that California in defending herself has not the approval of her sister States—then Japan will feel inclined to take advantage of the condition of a nation NOT UNITED.

Mr. Wilson's public condemnation of California—a State in which conditions are absolutely unknown to him—is a misfortune to California, and more of a misfortune to the whole country.

This nation has prospered and developed as a united nation.

We have let the outside world know that the interest of one part of this country was the interest of the whole country.

We have not felt that any one of the States in legislating for itself, defending itself against undesirable population or harmful land ownership, would lack the support of the other States.

Mr. Wilson and his Secretary of State, Mr. Bryan, have announced to the world that California is out of sympathy with the rest of the United States, and that her acts, perfectly legal and proper to those who understand California conditions, are not approved by the President of the United States, and, as he puts it, NOT APPROVED BY THE CITIZENS OF THE COUNTRY IN GENERAL.

If some English or French or German or other ruler had lectured California as Wilson has done, the people of the country might understand it.

But the people of this country do not understand that the President of the United States, who represents California as he does every other State in the Union, should publicly, emphatically and repeatedly side against California, allying himself with the unjustifiable demands of Japan, and encouraging the belligerent attitude of Japan and her hostile and critical tone toward this country.

Those who know conditions as Mr. Wilson could not possibly learn them in his study at Princeton are aware of the fact THAT CALIFORNIA MUST PROTECT HERSELF AGAINST ASIATIC LABOR AND ASIATIC LAND OWNERSHIP.

This continent, and especially that part of it facing on the Pacific, will remain either European in its population or become Asiatic.

It cannot be half and half. The Asiatic population and the European populations do not mix and have never mixed.

Where the Asiatics have been invaders, since the days of Attila and before, the Asiatics have been overwhelmed and destroyed by those whom they invaded.

Or the invaders have overwhelmed the invaded and made their territory Asiatic.

The Pacific Coast must be kept European in its population, or we must consent to its becoming Asiatic.

Mr. Wilson, we presume, will admit that it will be better for this country to keep conditions as they are, to keep the population of the Pacific Coast a population progressive with the standards of the United States and not change it for a population with the standards of Japan or of China.

Californians, our frontiersmen of the Pacific, have a hard task; they have done it well, and they have acted temperately.

THEY CANNOT PERMIT ASIATIC INVASION, THEY MUST NOT PERMIT IT, AND THEY WILL NOT PERMIT IT.

Nothing that Mr. Wilson can say, and nothing that his Secretary of State, Mr. Bryan, can spout when he gets to the Pacific Coast will change the attitude of California.

The men who live out there, who created that State and developed it, OWN IT AND MEAN TO CONTINUE IN OWNERSHIP.

They will not, to oblige Mr. Wilson or his theories, and they will not, to oblige Mr. Bryan or his fallacies, turn over to Japan or any other Asiatic nation the land that they have cultivated, fought for and won.

All that Mr. Wilson can do will not change the determination of the Californians.

But Mr. Wilson can continue along his present dangerous path, encouraging Japan in her warlike attitude, justifying the complaints of her citizens apparently, whereas they have NO just complaint.

These are the UNITED States. California is one of the United States.

Wilson is the President of all of the United States. And his public utterances should never fail to give the impression that these States ARE UNITED, united against Japan, against China, against the whole world if necessary, wherever the interests of one of the States are involved.

Mr. Wilson has studied history very deeply, so it is said.

He ought to know that the great original objection to a union of the States was the fear on the part of weaker States that their interests would be forgotten in the selfish scramble of bigger and more powerful communities.

Mr. Wilson is now justifying that fear which filled the minds of the smaller States among the original thirteen when he makes it appear that theories prevailing in Washington or theories prevailing in Lincoln, Neb., will use the power of government to interfere with the rights and the vital interests of one of the States in favor of an alien Power.

Avoid Debt as You Would a Harmful Drug

Endure Any Hardship Rather Than Buy Comfort at the Price of It

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

It is interesting to me to find how much more logical and discriminating men are than women, and it is always gratifying to me to be set aright by a man when I make an error of judgment or an untrue statement.

On several occasions in this column I have expressed my inborn and cultivated horror of debt; I have said it was kin to disgrace, and urged mothers to impress their children with this idea.

Now comes the good, clear-headed critic, in the form of a business man, who writes me as follows:

"Debt, for purposes of comfort, ease or pleasure, is to be condemned, but debt in a legitimate transaction, not for speculative purposes, but for real business, shows that a man has confidence in himself, respect for his own ability and determination to succeed.

"Your article is helpful, commendable, wise, but you do not want to limit any man's legitimate ambition or opportunities. Taken literally it might do so."

I realize the truth of his words and see the distinction that should be drawn between different kinds of debt.

But the trouble with most young people, unless they have been carefully educated to regard debt with aversion, is in the case with which they can argue that a speculation or a desired pleasure or comfort is a legitimate business.

Were my son living on this earth (instead of a celestial sphere), I am sure I would urge him to live, as John Crabb did, on 84 cents a year until he saved enough money for "legitimate business," rather than run in debt for that purpose; because I have seen so many young men (and women, too,) form the deadly debt limit, for business purposes, and never accomplish anything and never pay their debts.

Unless the moral nature is well developed and the ideals high, and self-respect and a fine sense of honor, are the accompaniments of ambition, it is a dangerous thing for a young man to find himself able to start on the road to business or education on money he has borrowed.

Only when we have earned money, or are accustomed to the thought that it belonged to us by inheritance, do we realize its worth or understand its importance.

Even when it comes by inheritance it is not always appreciated, for parents are prone to hide from their children the strain and stress through which they passed to acquire the competence which their offspring enjoy.

I recall one young girl of poor family, whose absorbing life of knowledge and whose indomitable will made her successful, borrowed, without security, one thousand dollars for educational purposes.

She graduated from a four years' college course, and by teaching during vacation season was able to pay interest on her debts; at the end of four years she obtained an excellent position in the far West as teacher, cleared her books of debts and began a brilliant career as a successful educator.

But I know a dozen other young women and men who have gone in debt for seemingly worthy purposes and have lost all sense of responsibility, even self-respect, by enjoying the privilege of unearned dollars. So the whole question seems to rest upon the moral character of the borrowers.

A man with a quarter of a million may borrow two million with far more impunity than one with five dollars a week may borrow a hundred.

We are all more or less influenced by our personal experiences, and it has been my misfortune in past times to lend money to those who seemed deserving of such assistance, and to see (with the exception of three people) all become "leaners" without any real sense of the responsibility they had incurred or obligation which rested upon them to liquidate the debt.

I have seen one whom I had believed in the direst straits, and whose needs it had seemed a privilege to supply, use the loan in extravagant ways, which would never have occurred to me—in carriages, where walking would have sufficed; in telegrams and long distance telephone messages, where letters and postals would have answered, and in hotel bills, where dairy restaurants would have sufficed.

Not once only has such an experience been mine, but at least a score of times, and I have grown to regard the lending of money as an injury to nineteen people out of twenty.

I have grown to think that debt is like a drug, and that he who lends to his friends is like one who applies the hypodermic needle.

Personally, I would rather endure any amount of hardship than purchase comfort at the price of debt. I have known what its burden and sting meant and have realized afterward that I could have succeeded better had I avoided the path of temporary dependence upon other people's money.

Yet, as my critic says, there are distinctions to be made in the ways and wherefores of debt, and I give his definition that those who are contemplating any venture upon borrowed money may analyze their purposes and decide whether or not they are wise to go on.

Breach of Promise Suits--Every Man Has a Right to Change His Mind —No Woman Who Is Really Hurt Will Drag Her Wounds Before Public for Money

By DOROTHY DIX

A TELLING blow for sex equality has just been struck by New York State Supreme Court Justice Kelly, who has ruled that the right to change your mind is not the sole prerogative of woman. Mere man has the same privilege.

In a breach of promise case, in which a fair lady was suing a faithful swain for renegging on his promise to marry her, Justice Kelly made the following rule:

"In the modern days of suffrage agitation," he said, 'we must not be too severe with the men, as long as no unfair advantage has been taken of the women.

"I am not going to let this young man rot in jail because he has changed his mind about marrying this girl. We must remember that the lady always reserves to herself the right to change her mind at any moment, and it seems to me the man ought to have the same right."

Good for Judge Kelly! That decision is based on good sound sense and justice. Moreover, it proves what we suffragists have always contended, and that is that equal rights for women will mean equal rights for men, and be just as much to men's advantage as they will be to women's.

The breach of promise suit has never been anything more or less than blackmail disguised as sentiment. No woman whose heart was really hurt would drag her wounds before the public for the sake of a little money. No woman with a vestige of delicacy or refinement in her composition would try to force a man to marry her who had tired of her and was trying to get rid of her.

To Treat the Proposal of Marriage as a Business Deal Is Absurd

It is an absurdity to contend that a proposal of marriage is in the same class with a business proposition, and that a man should be held financially responsible for not carrying out a matrimonial engagement as he would be for not fulfilling a business contract. The very essence of courtship is the emotions of love, attraction, fascination and desire that a woman rouses in a man's breast, and when these are gone—when he no longer loves her, when she no longer attracts or fascinates him and he has ceased to want her under the spell upon him is forfeited, and as a matter of fact, it would be a nice point of law to decide whether the woman who can no longer deliver the goods isn't the one who has defaulted on the contract, and not the man.

Moreover, Cupid is no piker. He is a dead game sport, and whenever a man or a woman sits down to the love game he or she must play the limit and take the risks. In addition, this is also to be said—that although women generally get a cold deal in matrimony they hold the trump hand in courtship. For it is the custom of men to woo maids with flowers and candy, and books and theatre tickets, and restaurant feeds, so that Romeo has paid his score as he went along, and even if he balks at the altar the account still stands in the woman's favor. Truly, 'tis better to have been wooed and jilted than never to have been wooed at all!

In deciding that a man has a right to change his mind about getting married and cannot be assessed heavy damages for doing so Justice Kelly has done a notable service to humanity. The breach of promise case should be thrown out of court and a man not only given the privilege of withdrawing from a matrimonial engagement if he decides that for any reason it would be best for him to do so, but he should be backed up by public opinion in doing it.

Thousands of men, carried away by life impulse of the moment or some wave of transient sentiment, have popped the question to girls that they knew were unfitted to be their wives, and rued their folly before the words were off of their lips. Thousands of other men have honestly thought themselves in love at the time they became engaged to women, but found themselves disillusioned long before their wedding day. Thousands of men are so completely out of love and disenchanted with their prospective wives that they would rather face the hangman than the preacher on their marriage morn.

Many Men Try to Make Their Sweethearts Jilt Them

These men would give ten years of their lives to unsay the words they have uttered, or to take back the promise they have given, to be free of the women that they know will hang like milestones about their necks, but they lack the courage to break their engagements. Many a man does everything in his power to force the girl to jilt him. He picks quarrels with her. He neglects her. Sometimes he even tries to tell her that he doesn't love her any more, but the more he attempts to break away the tighter she clings, and the more she weeps, and in the end he gives in and lets himself be led like a lamb to the slaughter because he hasn't the nerve to hurt her or to be branded as a quitter.

Let no man think that he is doing a noble and heroic thing to marry a woman after he has ceased to love her. He is doing her the most cruel wrong that one human being can inflict on another, and it would be a kinder act if he killed her than it is to marry her. He is sure to neglect her, to let her see how she bores him and what a burden she is on him, and to break her heart with a thousand little evidences of his indifference.

He takes his martyrdom out on her, and she pays every day of her life for his having been coerced into an unwilling marriage. The affection of a man for his wife cools down from the boiling point to sub-normal even when he's crazy about her when they got married, but Heaven help the unfortunate woman whose husband's love was at the zero point on their wedding day! Believe me, she knows what a long, cold Winter is like.

Therefore, in justice to himself and kindness to the woman, any man should take advantage of his right to change his mind if he decides that he has changed his heart, no matter what engagement rings he has given, nor how many vows of constancy he has sworn. Let him duck and run, though he were at the very foot of the altar. It would save his life, and be a blessing to the woman.

SELINA'S SAMPLES

By MINNA IRVING

A CINDER struck her in the eye,
A stranger knocked her hat awry.
She missed her watch when he was gone,
But still Selina kept right on
Collecting samples.
She journeyed home, and sat for days
In contemplation of the maize,
Reseda, royal, Nile and plum,
While clerks were trembling lest she come
Collecting samples.

At last she cried: "There's nothing here
That's just the proper thing, I fear.
I really think I must have missed
A place or two upon my list
Collecting samples.
I'll get a hat and make my blue
Foulard another season do."
It always ends that way, you know,
When women like Selina go
Collecting samples.

Selina took a train to town
To buy herself a Summer gown.
She trudged along from store to store,
Until her feet were hot and sore,
Collecting samples.
Her hands were full of silken snips,
Her pockets bulged with satin strips;
Her bag with lawn and cloth was crammed,
Yet in the crowd she madly jammed,
Collecting samples.

Pink, blue, and purple, brown and green,
And all the varied shades between,
And still she traveled on her way,
Collecting samples.
Designs of rings, and checks and dots,
Stripes, wreaths and silver dollar spots,
Or plain with borders on the side;
But on she sped unsatisfied,
Collecting samples.
